★ Tories roll back gasoline tax hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark said today an 18-cent rise in the excise tax on gasoline and motor fuels imposed in Tuesday's budget will be rolled back.

Clark told a news conference shortly after announcing that an election will be called Feb. 18 that other excise tax increases imposed in the budget — an apparent reference to higher taxes on tobacco and alcohol — will also be removed.

The alcohol tax rollback won't affect B.C. because the increases had not yet been tacked on.

Bob Wallace, general manager of the liquor distribution branch in Vancouver, said today his staff were in "a holding pattern" until they heard officially what the status of the taxes was to be.

A long list of other promised legislation also goes into limbo. Dissolution of Parliament means it dies and must be reintroduced in the next government.

Motorists began paying 18 cents a gallon more for gasoline — about four cents a litre — Wednesday morning as a result of Crosbie's increase in the federal excise tax to 25 cents a gallon.

Clark said the defeat of the government over the budget in the Commons Thursday meant that the excise tax measures and possibly some other parts of the budget could not be applied.

"We cannot continue with this excise tax because it is part of a budget package that was defeated by the Liberals and the NDP," Clark said.

He said Finance Minister John Crosbie planned to make a detailed statement on the status of the budget measures.

Clark said that if re-elected with a majority Feb. 18 that he would introduce the same budget measures.

Other legislation that dies is the mortgage interest and property tax scheme that would have paid homeowners up to $1,500 a year when it was fully implemented in the fourth year. For 1979, homeowners would have been eligible for up to $375 or one-quarter of the benefit.

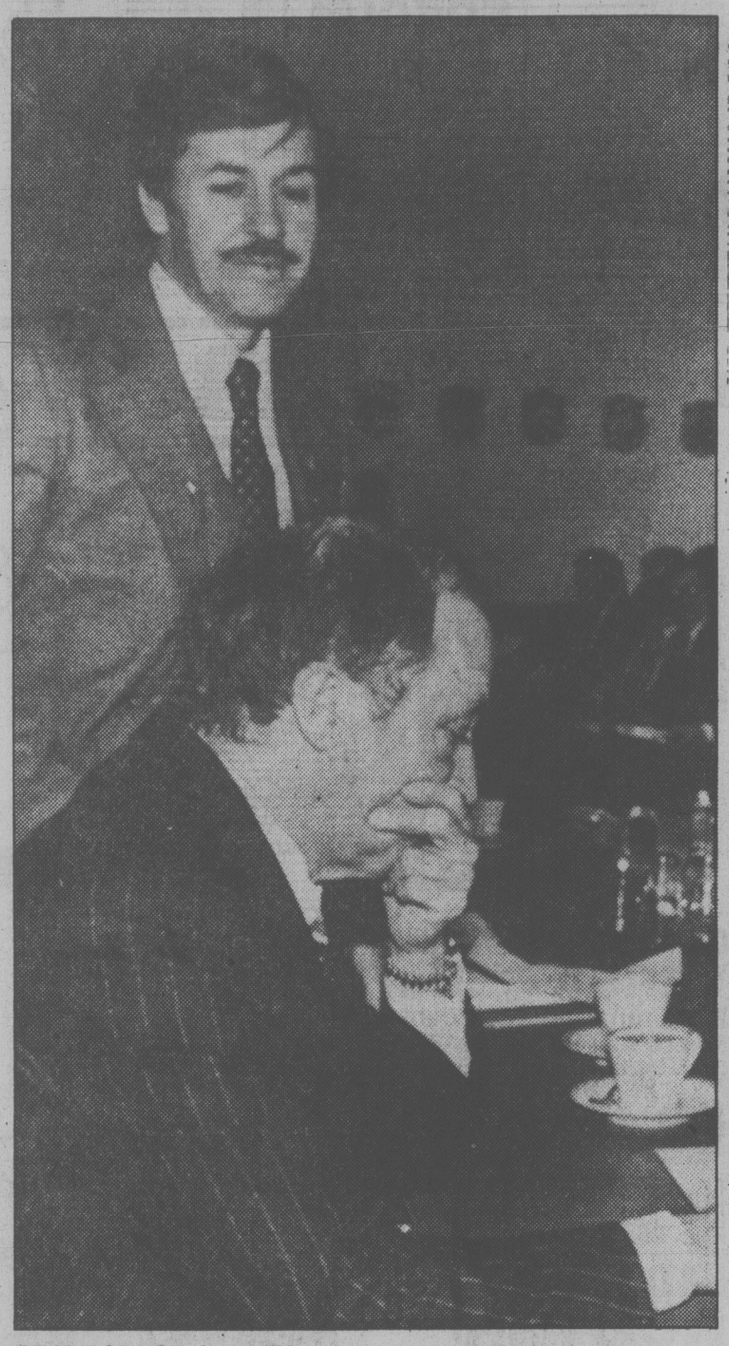

The government already is distributing income tax forms for the 1979 taxation year with the spaces for the tax credit included. Taxpayers apparently will be asked to ignore the sections.

Also on the list was the long-promised freedom-of-information bill which would have opened up the massive volumes of government records to easier public access.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon also said today the government has decided that, because of its defeat in the Commons Thursday night, it cannot make a selection of one of the two American fighters it had been considering.

The government had been prepared to spend $2.3 billion on either the General Dynamics F-16 or the MacDonnell Douglas F-18A. After years of study the government had been prepared to announce its choice within 24 hours.

McKinnon said he and Prime Minister Clark decided today that in view of the Commons defeat the government could not go ahead with the enormous expense at this time.

Trudeau silent as Grits gather

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark announced today that Parliament has been dissolved and a general election called for Feb. 18.

Clark made the announcement in the Commons a few hours after returning from a visit with Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer where he asked that Parliament be dissolved.

Clark met with Schreyer for 50 minutes at 8 a.m. EDT, 10 hours after the defeat of his minority government in the Commons.

The announcement was greeted by loud cheers from MPs on both sides of the Commons.

Liberal MPs then met behind closed doors to discuss who will lead them through the winter campaign.

Pierre Trudeau emerged after a 35-minute caucus and declined comment. "I have to move quickly to meet my kids," he said as he hustled home for lunch.

The Liberal national executive is meeting during the weekend and any decision on leadership during the campaign must be authorized by that 36-member body.

Trudeau announced three weeks ago that he intends to resign as leader and a leadership convention had been planned for March 28-30 in Winnipeg.

There appeared to be a movement in the Parliamentary caucus to encourage Trudeau to lead the Liberal campaign.

The Clark government, slightly less than seven months old, was defeated 139-133 in the Commons Thursday on a motion sponsored by the New Democratic Party condemning the government for its first budget unveiled Tuesday.

The campaign could start almost immediately.

Party strategists met hurriedly to work out details of the 66-day campaign including such things as the chartering of aircraft to ferry the leaders across the country, the printing of campaign literature and the raising of money.

A number of Liberals have said they were not ready for the campaign — that most of their efforts had been concerned with planning for the leadership changeover — while the Conservatives have been kept on a campaign footing for the past few months.

Officials of the New Democratic Party said party fundraisers were already on the

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian taxpayers may end up spending $100 million on elections in less than a year.

Final figures for the May 22 general election haven't yet been tabulated but the chief electoral office estimates the cost at $52 million.

In the last election a $17 million enumeration bill was the government's largest expense. It cost about $13 million to set up polling stations, $7 million to print enumeration lists and ballots and $6 million to hire returning officers, enumerators and poll clerks. The electoral office ran up another $5 million and

Sharp jump in transport costs boosts inflation rate to 9.4%

OTTAWA (CP) — A sharp rise in transportation costs pushed consumer prices up one per cent in November from Oetober, the largest monthly change since May, Statistics Canada reported today.

The latest figures push the inflation rate for the 12 months ending in November to 9.4 per cent, slightly ahead of the 9.3 per cent rate recorded for 12 months to October.

Higher transportation and housing costs accounted for two-thirds of the over-all monthly rise.

As a result, the consumer price index for all items stands at 197.8 for November, up from 195.9 the previous month and 180.8 in November, 1978.

That means that the standard basket of goods and services which cost $100 in 1971 — the year the index base was set at 100 — now costs $197.80.

The purchasing power of a 1971 dollar in November was about 51 cents compared with 1971, unchanged from October but down from 55 cents a year ago.

Costs in the housing sector rose by 0.7 per cent last month from October as a result of increases for both rented and owned accommodation, fuel oil, household furnishings and equipment.

Increases in food prices of 0.2 per cent in November over the month before were the least inflationary of all segments of the index. But compared to a year ago, food prices are still 12.2 per cent higher and lead the index for all consumer prices.

Offsetting the food index performance, were continued strong increases in clothing prices which jumped 1.2 per cent from the month before and, as well, a 1.6-per-cent rise in health and personal care costs such as dental charges, hairdressing services and alcoholic beverages.

Prices were up in all cities in the survey. Twelve-month cost-of-living increases for 15 major cities in the survey were:

St. John's, Nfld., up 9.8 per cent; Charlottetown-Summerside, up 8.6 per cent; Halifax, up 9.0 per cent; St. John, N.B., up 9.3 per cent; Quebec, up 10 per cent; Montreal, up 10.3 per cent; Ottawa, up 9.3 per cent; Toronto, up 9.7 per cent; Thunder Bay, Ont., up 9.2 per cent; Winnipeg, up 9.3 per cent; Regina, up 9.4 per cent; Saskatoon, up 10.5 per cent; Edmonton, up 8.7 per cent; Calgary, up 8.9 per cent; Vancouver, up 7.5 per cent.

TSE index plummets

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market dropped extremely sharply in active mid-session trading Friday.

The TSE 300 index was down 32.34 to 1,733.50 ing the defeat of the federal government Thursday night.

All of the 14 stock groups fell, with the largest drop in real estate and construction.

The dollar opened at 85.12 cents (U. S.) after closing at 85.62 Thursday. The currency has lost exactly one cent since Tuesday when it closed at 86.12 following what analysts called "good energy news."

"It's simple: the dollar went down because there's no government," said one trader tersely.

Iraq attacks Iranian border

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iraqi forces using heavy artillery today launched attacks at locations along the border with Iran but pulled back a short time later, the Iranian government reported.

The state radio blamed the United States for fomenting the attack.

The radio quoted the governor of the region as saying, "Iraqi forces armed with heavy weapons launched an aggression on a section of the Iranian border."

"The Iraqi aggression," it added, "is taking place at a time when President Carter's government and its agents are defeated in their confrontation against the Iranian nation's will and determination (but) may succeed through their agents (in the attacks in southwest Iran)."

Later, an Iranian foreign ministry spokesman said: "I understand they came a little bit into our country and then they went back to their country and it's going to be all right."

The two countries share the "neck" of the gulf through which flows some 60 percent of the free world's oil.

The attack appeared to be close to the Shatt el-Arab River which forms a natural frontier between Iran and Iraq. The same area was the scene of fierce fighting between Iranian government forces and ethnic Arab guerrillas last summer and Iran accused Iraq of aiding the rebels.

Meanwhile, in The Hague, an official said today the International Court of Justice, working at unprecedented speed, will give its judgment Saturday in the case brought against Iran by the United States.

The decision follows the public hearing Monday in which U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti appealed to the court to order the release of 50 American hostages.

In other developments:

— Observers in Tehran predict a team of Western ambassadors will visit the 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in the next day or two as Ayatollah Khomeini's regime steps up its efforts to woo the international community.

— The U.S freeze on Iranian government assets is beginning to pinch some small American businesses that are still awaiting payment for goods already delivered.

— Japan bowed to U.S. pressure today to curb its dealings with Iran and agreed to limit its oil imports until the 50 U.S. hostages held in Tehran are freed.

— The Fijian cabinet has overruled a decision by Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara to allow the deposed shah sanctuary in Fiji.

— The health of the shah may have worsened and doctors who treated him in New York will fly to Texas to see whether the former monarch needs further surgery.

THE OUTCASTS

Bennett astounded

Premier Bill Bennett says the defeat of the Clark government will cause some uncertainty in the preparation of a provincial budget and throws some doubt on the future of joint federal-provincial projects.

The premier said today he is astounded by the events in Ottawa.

He would not answer directly when asked if any programs in B.C. will be delayed as a result of the election call.

"What happens is, it puts some uncertainty on joint federal-provoncial projects," he said.

However, he believes agreements reached on such projects as the Vancouver and Victoria convention centres will proceed.

On the Victoria centre he commented: "The provincial government is prepared to go ahead. I am hopeful that the local interests that have been able to get our support will be as persuasive with the federal government."

miscellaneous expenses accounted for the rest.

The voters list from the May 22 general election will be the official preliminary list for the coming vote, the chief electoral officer said today.

It's the first time this procedure has been adopted for a federal election but it has been used by Alberta and Quebec, information officer Jack Forrester said.

Persons whose names are on the list will receive cards from their returning officer telling them also where they can vote.

In another change, the preliminary list of voters will not be displayed in a public place. This is because of complaints from women living alone that the list is used for harassing telephone calls.

Persons who do not receive cards from the returning officer by late January will have to get in touch with the returning officer.

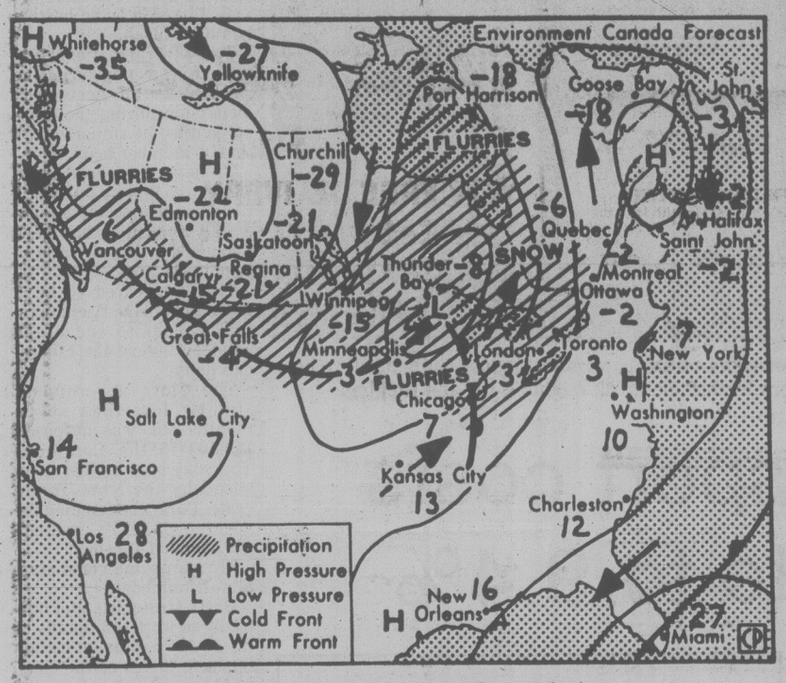

Businesses, organizations or individuals who contribute to political parties will find party organizers quickly beating paths to their doors.

Parties can spend about 30 cents a voter, or $4.5 million, in national campaigns to cover leaders' costs and operations of party offices.

Political hams drop fat in fire

OTTAWA — There is, in the politician, an essential hunk of ham — an ingredient that forces the species into the trade in the first place.

Last night, while the nation watched in some incredulity, the men who out-hammed themselves gathered in self-satisfied splendor on the green carpet that separates by two swords' length the space between Her Majesty's government and Her Majesty's ostentatiously Loyal Opposition.

It was in that bell-ringing void that Speaker James Jerome ("In my opinion the nays have it" — they didn't) called for division and the members of this short Parliament shaped up to be counted.

The galleries, of course, were packed and these gentlemen and few ladies beneath, who labor in such ordinary isolation, absolutely basked under the attention and the crackle of anticipation that vibrated up to the spectators.

This was spectacle, this was suspense and an observer could not help but derive a sense of a convention of aluminum siding salesmen wallowing in self-esteem.

Dennis Dawson, the spirited and leather-jacketed young Liberal from Quebec City, joshes with the huge Tory Lincoln Alexander, a towering Othello among so many intellectual pygmies.

Monique Begin, in her excitement, tries to embrace the eminently-unembraceable John Munro. Bob Rae, the erudite little NDP heir-apparent who reeks of Oxbridge confidence, leans against a Hansard desk to chat in showbiz fraternity calm with John Crosbie, the Newfie millionaire who deliberately talks like a dustman.

Shakespeare would have loved it

The point is that there is a deliberate preening to the crowd, a pandering to the audience gaping from the galleries above. This is the way Shakespeare intended it: japes for peasants, vulgar amusements for the short-of-attention-span, drop-in audiences. Soap opera, live.

Ray Hnatyshyn, the weakest member of the Clark cabinet, the indecisive energy minister who has fuelled this foolish Liberal passion by his weak defence of the number one issue in the country, has a look on his face — above his revealing ultra-suede uniform — that indicates he would rather go to the people than be dropped from the cabinet.

What is most interesting, as the head-by-head count unfolds through the opposition ranks, is the pensive air.

While the quick minds in the press gallery add, subtract (and contemplate a ruined Christmas holiday in a jet rather than one cossetted with plum pudding) the Liberals appear in a slight stage of animated culture shock.

They have bluffed, and they have puffed, a party without leadership or direction since May 22, and now their careless bluff has been called.

As the count proceeds down the stunned Tory ranks — the fumbled result now apparent to all — the Liberals who were deservedly thrown out of power after 17 years seem for the first time in six months to be thoughtful. Bryce Mackasey is already preparing his interview in the TV chaos outside, a blood offering for the convention chaos to come.

Perks of the prostitute may vanish

Afterwards, the most shocked survivors — with good reason — were the usually cocky NDP troupe who have had in this nervous Parliament the traditional perks of the prostitute — power without responsibility.

The sudden realization that an irritated electorate — infuriated by an unwanted election over the Christmas and New Year holiday session — would turn in its usual fashion against a bothersome third party had set in.

The Liberals, the party with a supposed graduate degree in power, finds itself this morning with no clear idea of its leader, its succession, its convention or its future. John Turner can wisely pour himself a scotch in relief.

The truth is that the Liberals and the NDP, playing elaborate games in the Commons these past few spurious non-confidence motions, were caught unawares by the unpredictability of the loonies they never should have relied upon — the Socreds.

They were playing showbiz games for the TV cameras and their own egos — and on this night they were nabbed.

They will be punished on a chill February day by very resentful voters. And they deserve what they will get.

Tories brought down

phone trying to find money to replenish coffers run low by the expenses of the last campaign, which ended May 22.

The surprising defeat of the government Thursday night brought pandemonium on the Commons floor as the results of the vote were announced. MPs roared and threw their papers into the air.

Spectator galleries were jammed with the curious who had come to witness a rare event — the fall of a government.

According to the Toronto Star's Ottawa correspondent, the government made a desperate $1-billion bid to avoid defeat during the 15 minutes preceeding the non-confidence vote.

The newspaper says that an unidentified Tory MP acted as emissary between Prime Minister Joe Clark and Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy, who sat at opposite ends of the house.

His offer to the Social Credit party, the Star says, was a promise to double an energy tax credit offered Tuesday in Finance Minister John Crosbie's controversial budget to help offset the sting of the 18-cent-a-gallon gasoline increase.

In the end, Roy's acceptance of the the Tory bid would not have mattered. Even if the five Social Credit members had voted with the government instead of abstaining, it would still have left the government one vote short of a tie.

Clark, whose Conservatives won a minority May 22, attacked the oppositon parties at a brief news conference following the vote for deciding to "disrupt the nation's business."

"From the first day, the opposition parties showed no interest in making Parliament work," he said. "Instead they have systematically obstructed its business. Now they have brought it to a complete halt."

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said it was Clark who had caused the defeat by attempting to govern as if he had a majority and yet insisting on pushing ahead with unpopular measures such as the dismantling of Petro-Canada.

He also accused Clark of "reneging on a whole series of promises" including a $2 billion tax cut. Instead of the tax cut, his first budget had raised taxes by $3.5 billion.

The Liberals, faced with the prospects of a lame-duck leader as they head into the campaign, rallied around Trudeau to convince him to lead the party through the campaign.

Both the Liberals and the NDP have been high spirited in the last two weeks with the release of a Gallup poll showing Conservative support had dropped to 28 per cent of the electorate compared with 47 per cent for the Liberals and 23 per cent for the NDP.

The vote was an end to a tension-filled day as party strategists on both sides of the House scrambled to line up their members.

The five-member Social Credit contingent added to the intensity earlier in the day by announcing it would abstain from voting. The Conservatives managed to barely hang on in two earlier non-confidence votes with the support of the Social Credit.

Three of the 136 Conservatives were missing for the vote: External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald, who was in Paris on her way back from a NATO foreign ministers' conference in Brussels, Nova Scotia MP Lloyd Crouse (South Shore), on government business in Australia, and Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain, Sask.) who was in hospital.

All 27 NDP members were present and only one Liberal was missing — Montreal MP Serge Joyal, who didn't make it back from New York. Two Liberals were taken out of hospital for the vote — New Brunswick MP Maurice Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi) and Claude Lajoie from Trois-Rivieres.

Clark cut short a visit to southwestern Ontario after news of the Social Credit decision to abstain on the vote and returned to Ottawa.

Liberals insisted they would all be in their seats for the vote while admitting that no one wanted an election.

"We're not ready," said Warren Allmand, MP for the Montreal riding of Notre-Dame-de-Grace and a former Liberal cabinet minister.

"But what the hell can we do? We can't vote for this budget."

Two Tory regimes were shorter

OTTAWA (CP) — The Joe Clark government, defeated Thursday night in the Commons, has been in power less than seven months. But two other federal governments had shorter lives.

Clark's Conservatives were elected 206 days ago today, on May 22, and his cabinet was sworn in 13 days later on June 4. The Clark government remains in office during an election campaign as caretaker, ending only if defeated at the polls and replaced.

The Conservative government of Sir Charles Tupper back in 1896 lasted only 68 days, from May 1 to July 8 that year.

The administration of Conservative Sir Arthur Meighen ran 89 days from June 28 to Sept. 25, 1926.

Into the abyss

When a game of brinksmanship is played out to the bitter end, at least some of the players fall into the abyss.

In the case of the game played by the 31st Parliament of Canada, it appears that virtually all the players may have plunged over the cliff together.

The Liberals, to all intents and purposes, are leaderless. They must run a campaign either with a retread leader decisively rejected by the voters seven months ago or with a lesser known leader who won't have much time to convince voters that he is the man to run the country.

The Conservatives have their backs against the wall. The party must take to the campaign trail trying to convince Canadians that huge increases in energy prices are not only good for them but good for the country. It will be a task as difficult as the one undertaken by Bob Stanfield in 1974 when he tried to sell wage and price controls.

And the New Democrats face a tradition that has seen their ranks in the House of Commons dwindle in the election following a quick defeat of a minority government.

The opposition parties say this is an election over broken Tory campaign promises, an election over a proposed budget which would put too much pressure on the Canadian economy at a time when the United Sates is thought to slipping into recession.

There is no doubt that Prime Minister Joe Clark blundered into some unrealistic promises during the last election campaign. Moving the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem, cutting taxes by $2 billion dollars, slashing interest rates and reducing the civil service by 60,000 people: all have proved to be impossible in the current political and economic climate. The promises were wrong. But it would have been even more wrong for Clark not to have admitted his mistakes by reversing his position.

In the end, however, this may prove to be an election about energy — energy costs and energy self-sufficiency. Clark and his finance minister may have tried too hard to sell the initial round of price increases on the basis on reducing the Canadian spending deficit. It might have been wiser to propose that money derived from the tax would be used for energy projects to serve Canada's future needs.

However, a key element of the Tories proposed budget was the five-year blueprint for raising the price of Canadian crude oil and natural gas. After months of negotiating, Clark was close to an agreement with Alberta on how the extra revenue would be divided between Ottawa and the provinces.

The Tories have argued that petroleum prices must rise closer to world levels and the new wealth be used both to alleviate Canada's deficit problem and to move the country closer to energy self-sufficiency. Those are worthwhile aims the opposition parties could not support. But what about the Canadian electorate?

The timing of this election may not be the best. It could complicate the Quebec sovereignty-association referendum, also scheduled for the spring. The referendum debate should surely be carried out in as calm and rational atmosphere as possible, not one inflamed by partisan rivalries.

Moreover, Canada is in need of a period of greater political stability to work diligently on improving the economic situation.

Yet the issue is clear. Perhaps it is good that Canadians will have a chance to say unequivocally whether they are prepared to make some sacrifice for the sake of energy reality or whether they wish to continue living in a fool's paradise until the last possible moment.

An excellent choice

Congratulations also appear in order to the city police board for attracting and hiring such an outstanding candidate. One cannot, of course, judge Snowden's performance before he's even set foot inside the building at 625 Fisgard Street, but his potential appears excellent.

He is from B.C. and knows B.C.'s specific laws and eccentricities. He is a "policeman's policeman" in that he worked his way up from the beat to the position of inspector in the Vancouver police force. He is a nationally-recognized expert on the modern methods of community, preventive and team policing — all methods that are expected to be considered for Victoria during the next few years.

And, perhaps most important, he sounded sensible and reasonable in the first statements he made after being hired.

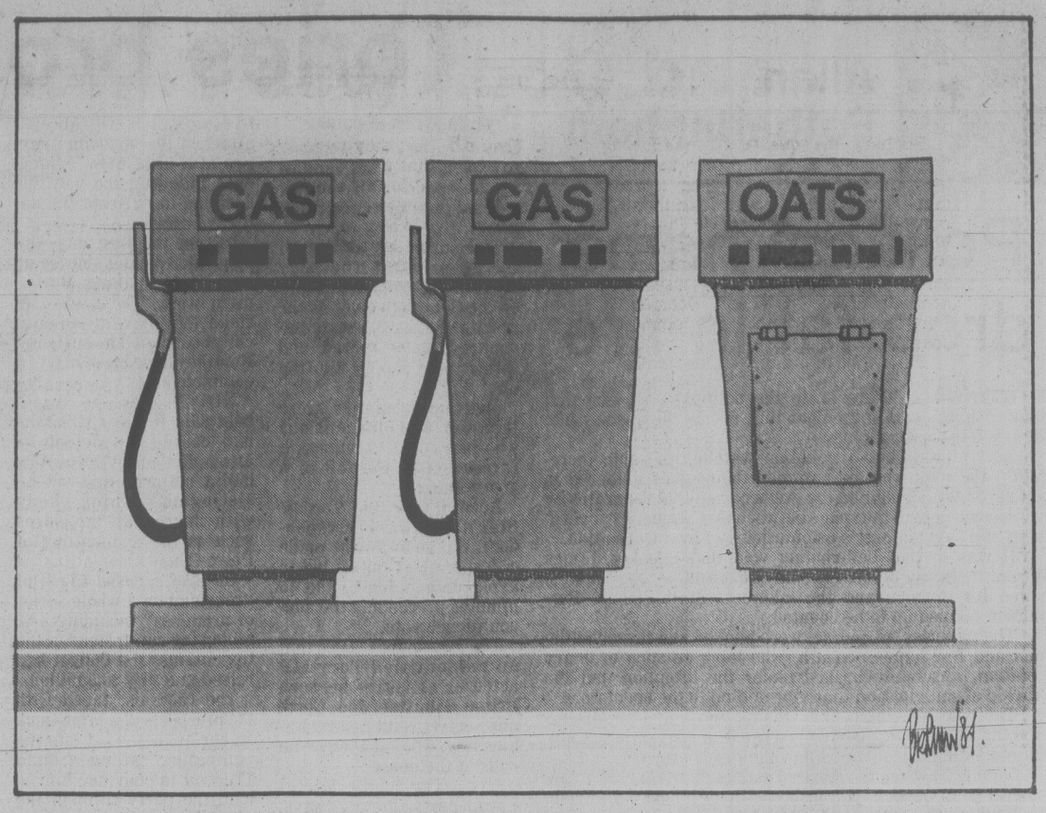

He stated he believes in the general principles of "pro-active policing" — the trade jargon for the philosophy that significant emphasis should be put on preventing crime rather than just on catching wrong-doers after the fact.

But at the same time he stressed that specific models of force organization cannot be transplanted holus-bolus from one community to another. He expects to spend some time learning about the Victoria community and its needs before beginning to decide what sort of changes might be needed in the force's structure.

He will not have an easy job. The struggles of policing a downtown core while maintaining contact in residential neighborhoods, the constant problems of budget and staffing: all will test his skills.

He has the qualities needed to take Victoria's police force through the 1980s, in the same way that outgoing chief Jack Gregory was the perfect man for the job when he was appointed some 16 years ago.

Gregory deserves the thanks and best wishes of Victorians as he takes his well-earned retirement.

WILLIAM BORDERS

Soames: the last governor

LONDON — Eleven years ago, when a Labor Party government appointed Christopher Soames to the prestigious and important position of ambassador to France, it seemed to many to be a most unlikely choice. Although he was Winston Churchill's son-in-law, Soames was simply a defeated former member of Parliament, and a Conservative one at that.

But he confounded his critics, performing very well in the demanding diplomatic post, by all accounts, and playing a crucial role in Britain's entry into the Common Market.

This month, when he was chosen to be Britain's last colonial governor in Rhodesia, Lord Soames, a title he gained last year when he was made a life peer, was again not the obvious choice for the job. He has no particular African experience, but he responded to the challenge with what friends say was a characteristic enthusiasm.

"If I can play any part in helping Rhodesia to turn away from war," the 59-year-old diplomat said the other day, "then I would have contributed something worth contributing."

Early start

A bear of a man with an upper-class accent and a manner that some find haughty, Soames is the Conservative Party leader in the House of Lords. He is also a member of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's cabinet, and an increasingly close adviser of hers.

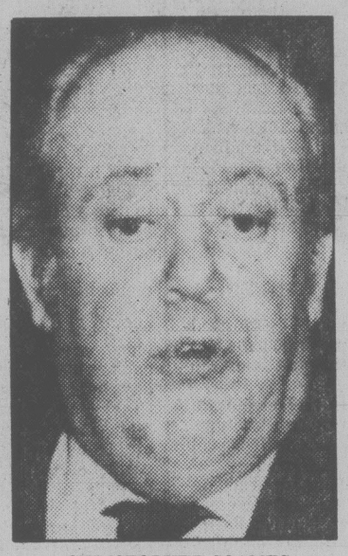

Soames got an early start in British politics, first winning a seat in the House of Commons at the age of 29. Having Churchill for a father-in-law did him no harm at all. But his defenders pointed out that far from taking a safe Conservative seat, as he probably could have done, the novice politician contested and won a Labor Party constituency in Bedfordshire, northwest of London.

He held the seat for 16 years, working his way up into the cabinet. When he finally lost the seat in 1966, it was, according to the conventional political wisdom, because he was not enough of a "constituency man," preferring to focus on such grander issues as Britain's role in the world.

"Christopher doesn't like to bother with the details, which he considers boring," said a friend who worried that this trait might cause problems in his delicate new job in Salisbury. "He prefers the sweep of history."

Arthur Christopher John Soames was born on Oct. 12, 1920, the son of a Buckinghamshire landowner. He was educated at Eton and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, winning a commission in the Coldstream Guards just before the outbreak of World War II.

During the war he served in Italy, France and North Africa, winning the French Croix de Guerre at Alamein. Afterward, he was posted to the British Embassy in Paris as an assistant military attache and it was there, in 1946, that he met Mary Churchill, the youngest of the five Churchill children. They were married within a year.

CHRISTOPHER SOAMES
. . . dedicated to peace

In her recent best-selling biography of her mother, Clementine, Mary Soames recalls that "from their very first meeting my father and Christopher took to each other."

Although frankly acknowledging that her mother had some initial misgivings about her fiance, Lady Soames describes the relationship between him and Winston Churchill this way:

"It was the beginning of a warm, a moving relationship, which grew in affection and trust. It had an enormous effect on Christopher's personality and life. And if my father gave much to Christopher, Christopher also was able to bring the breath of fresh air from outside. Once launched into politics himself, Christopher was able to perform a very real service in being a link between Winston and a younger generation of politicians on both sides of the House of Commons."

He served as parliamentary private secretary to Prime Minister Churchill from 1952 to 1955, developing a filial closeness to him. Ten years later he was instrumental in helping Clementine and the rest of the family in the difficult task of persuading Sir Winston that the time had come to retire from Parliament. Some people believe that given Winston Churchill's sometimes strained relationship with his only son, Randolph, he made a sort of surrogate son of Christopher. Certainly it is easy to describe Soames as Churchillian, because of his girth, his pouchy face and his fondness for large dark cigars.

Five children

Iain Macleod, who served with Soames in the cabinet, was once asked about him: "What lies behind that incredibly bluff exterior?" Macleod thought it over for a moment and replied: "Behind that incredibly bluff exterior lies an incredibly bluff interior." But close friends describe him as quite jolly in private, a bon vivant with a taste for good wine and laughter.

Lord and Lady Soames have five grown children and divide their time between a house in the country and a stylish apartment in the Kensington section of London. The apartment is decorated with dozens of pictures of their children and memorabilia of the Churchill era in British politics.

In Salisbury they will live in the lavish governor's house, as Soames struggles with the delicate task of playing out one of the last acts of British imperial diplomacy.

In 1942, in one of his most widely-quoted statements, Winston Churchill assured an anxious nation that, "I have not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire." A good many Britons saw some irony in the fact that his daughter and son-in-law left London Tuesday afternoon to do just that.

CLAUDE ADAMS

A brief history of diplomacy

WASHINGTON — In the 3,000-year history of diplomacy among nations, the current hostage drama in Iran ranks as perhaps the most outrageous breach of a code older than Christianity.

Political scientists and other academics here agree that while acts of terrorism against envoys are not that rare, never before has a government so openly defied the conventions that safeguard diplomats in foreign lands.

The closest parallel to today's drama in Tehran was the 55-day siege of western embassies in China during the Boxer Rebellion of 1900.

That seige, which ended when an expeditionary force routed the fanatic Boxers, resulted in the Chinese paying $25 million in compensation to the U.S., whose legation was among those besieged.

Two others

Ironically, two other diplomatic incidents in this century — one serious and one farcical — have caused irritation between the U.S. and Iran. Neither had any longlasting effect.

In 1924, an American vice-consul in Tehran was attacked and killed by a rampaging mob.

An angry U.S. government demanded indemnity for the diplomat's wife, expenses of sending a warship to Iran, and the punishment of those directly involved in the killing. The Tehran government complied on all counts, including a $60,000 indemnity.

The second incident occurred in 1935 in the state of Maryland. An Iranian diplomat stopped by police for speeding in his chauffeured limousine decided to resist arrest and was handcuffed and dragged before a judge for his troubles.

His government raised a stink, the arresting officers were discharged, and the U.S. government issued a formal apology. The chauffeur got away with paying 75 cents in court costs.

Only once before has a U.S. diplomat been held against his will by a foreign government. That was in 1948, when Chinese Communists detained Consul-General Angus Ward and his staff and held them incommunicado for a year.

The current U.S. embassy occupation is entirely unique and constitutes a new page in the history of diplomacy, says Dr. Jules Davids, professor of diplomatic history at Georgetown University here.

"For the first time, we have a government that couldn't care less about diplomatic immunity or international law," Davids said in an interview.

The revolutionary govenment of the Ayotollah Khomeini, he said, has turned on its ear a tradition spanning three millenia and directly challenged the whole body of international law.

Diplomacy was a branch of statecraft first practised by the Egyptians as far back as the 13th century B.C. The Greeks and Romans refined the functions of emissaries and guaranteed them freedom from "injury and insult" in the performance of their duties.

Yet it was not until the 15th century that permanent missions were set up. This occurred in Italy, and the respecting of "exterritoriality" — the sanctity enjoyed by envoys, their families, and their premises in foreign lands — slowly took hold throughout Europe.

The Congress of Vienna in 1815 codified diplomatic practice and although the U.S. was not a signator it generally adopted these codes.

The Islamic nations and Oriental rulers reluctantly agreed to honor the privileged status of Western diplomats later in the century, under pressure from the West.

The final key date was 1961, when the Vienna Convention brought the codes up to date under the auspices of the Unived Nations. This is the convention which the U.S. is quoting in its case against Iran at the World Court.

With very few expectations, the U.S. has followed these codes to the letter, even in wartime. After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Japanese diplomats in the U.S. were placed in protective custody only until they were ready to return home.

Indeed, two of the diplomats, including Ambassador Nomura, were in the office of U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the very moment the American fleet was attacked.

In a number of cases, American diplomats in Iron Curtain countries during the Cold War years were accused of involvement in espionage, but they were simply expelled and the U.S. reciprocated in kind. In 1950, one such incident resulted in a breaking of diplomatic relations with Bulgaria for a decade.

Personal apology

The U.S. has been highly sensitive to any breaches of the code, whether they occurred here or elsewhere. In 1957, after a Ghanian minister was ejected from a Delaware restaurant because of his color, President Eisenhower invited him to the White House for a personal apology over breakfast.

And when a U.S. minister in Ethiopia was attacked by local police and members of a mob in 1932, the U.S. hotly demanded redress. The policemen were duly tried, convicted and jailed.

Occasionally, this lofty regard for diplomatic privilege is carried to the absurd. When a fire broke out at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa in 1956, the Russians would not allow firemen into the building until all the files had been emptied and the documents carried away by the staff.

A hundred Ottawa firemen stood by helplessly and by the time the Soviets gave them the go-ahead, the building was thoroughly gutted.

Anti-litter

My name is Kyla and I am eight years old. I am writing to you about an article that I think should be in the newspaper.

The article is the littering. The littering that makes playgrounds not able to be played in, that makes schools look ugly. I think an article like that might help to show what litter is doing to the world. — Kyla Perrin, Victoria.

Take a stand

Charles Barber, MLA, recently mailed me a copy of a report by Stevenson and Kellogg which concerns senior B.C. government employees comprising all management levels from deputy ministers to executive secretaries excluded from union membership.

The report makes monthly salary comparisons between this small group known as B.C. Managers Association and the B.C. average.

The report states "government managers salaries are not well related to the market place" and would fall 22.1 per cent behind the B.C. average if not given an increase.

It also states "certain positions are being paid less than union members they supervise and significantly less than union members in equivalent positions."

Mr. Barber's brief covering letter concludes "as you will see, pressures on the public purse do not exclusively come from union members."

Surely Mr. Barber would not suggest this management group should not receive adequate salary increases under the outlined circumstances; stimulated by the liberality of negotiated settlements made with B.C.G.E.U.

It is encouraging to know he is recognizing unions are a pressure on the public purse; possibly the recent events in the NDP in Saskatchewan will further convince Barber and others that our legislators must take a stand between union pressure and the public purse. — [illegible] 401-940 Dallas Road.

Not delightful

In response to Nov. 29 article about the "nostalgia" of the Princess Marguerite, please don't fool yourselves! When was the last time you made that "delightful" trip?

I made the fateful round-trip journey myself this summer and it was hardly "nostalgic" or "fun". It was grossly overcrowded and there literally were not enough seats for all of the passengers. The lower deck was a poorly lighted, nearly windowless, smoke-filled sardine can, and the upper deck was filled with people finding any place they could to sit and trying to keep warm. The food in the dining room was hardly fit for human consumption and that was after standing in line for an hour to get it.

By the time one gets down to the dock in Seattle by 7:15 a.m. to be assured of even getting on board by 8:00 a.m., then spends 4½ hours sandwiched in (and if it's foggy or rainy, forget the stroll on the deck and the scenery!) and another half-hour clearing customs, you're quite disappointed to learn that you have to be back in line to get on by 3:15 p.m. in order to sail at 4:30 p.m., which leaves you only a couple of short hours in the most beautiful city in the West, which leaves you with, "Do we go to Sealand, or to Butchart Gardens, or just take a quick trip around downtown?"

I do pray that the B.C. government will do better next time so that the tourists, as well as the businessmen, will be able to reap the benefits. Let's face it! The "Maggie" may have been worth her salt in days gone-by, but she, too, deserves to retire, as she's just too old to handle the ever-increasing tourist flow. — Shirley Robinson, 305-1435 Elford Avenue.

'. . . and God bless TV for everything we didn't need'

By TOM SHALES
Washington Post

But hark, the squawk of a malfunctioning smoke alarm is heard in the land. It seems to be coming from that cozy little tract house down there between the K-Mart and the Piggly-Wiggly, just off Highway Clutter. Why, it's the double-insulated, aluminum-sided, primo-sashed, heavily insured domicile of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public and their 2.3 children: Johnny, Joanie, and Point Three.

Christmas morning, and the family is downstairs, which really is best in a none-storey house, opening their gaily wrapped presents. Not too gaily wrapped of course, but in point of fact wrapped by the amazing new household discovery Wrap-O-Matic, the fantastic packing crate, gift wrap, sticky tape, gift card, wastebasket, canasta table, and TV tray All In One!

Yes, the Publics have been good citizens all year long, but they've been really good TV viewers. They especially like to watch those clanky and tacky little UHF stations where the movies occasionally interrupt the commercials and no commercial is shown less than four times an hour.

They did what they were told and they bought what they were sold and now, well, why don't we just drop in and see how things are going?

"Oh, John!" Mrs. Public is exclaiming. "I just love my new Rondo Mini-Dryer! It's the perfect Christmas gift. No more trying to pack that big half-ton hot-air furnace into my teeny-tiny suitcase. Of course, we never go anywhere, but just in case . . ."

"Mmmmmm! And so NICE to be NEAR!"

Very well little Joanie," Mrs. Public says. "Which one of these gaily wrapped packages will it be?"

"Who cares? They all look exactly the same, and all their flaps are coming undone. I'll try this one. Let's see — oh boy! My very own Pobeel Magic Bottle Cutter!"

"That's right, Joanie — now you can take those old, useless, worn-out bottles and turn them into beautiful vases, lamps, goblets, centrepieces, Grecian urns, baptismal fonts and hundreds of other useful and decorative ideas!"

Now it's Johnny's turn to open a present.

"Jeepers Creepers!" he shouts with alacrity. "A Clunko Pocket Fisherman! Now I can go fishing whenever so inclined!"

"That's right, Johnny," says beaming Daddy. "Now you can fish anytime, any place, anywhere, any how, any day! Of course, we are 2,000 miles from the nearest body of water . . ."

"Aw gee Dad, it makes a perfect Christmas gift — just like I saw on TV! See, 'Batteries, hooks, line, rod, reel, fish and body of water not included.' "

"How about this," chirps a delighted Joanie. "A genuine Rondell Rhinestone and Stud Setter! Now I can turn ordinary bluejeans into fabulous couturier fashions! I can't wait for all my friends to come over for a rhinestone and stud setting party."

"Gosh," says Dad. "You can rhinestone and stud-set all my suits, ties, vests, pyjamas and underpants!"

But Dad hasn't been forgotten in all the fun, oh no. He gets the thrill of his life — his very own lifetime supply of Zany Glue, complete with a hard hat so he can paste himself to a steel girder and dangle in mid-air. And Mom just loves her four-record set of "Polkas on the Roof" by those wild and whacky Fat Polka Maniacs.

"Not available in stores," notes young Johnny. "I just rushed $7.98 for records, $12.98 for tapes to Polka, Box UHF, Industrial Park, N.J., and allowed four to six weeks for delivery."

But still to come the great moment.

"Hey wait a minute," Joanie suddenly interjects. "Would somebody please shut off that blankety-blank smoke alarm?"

"Now dear heart," cautions Dad, "that smoke alarm could save our lives. Remember the poor people we saw burn-to-a-turn in that commercial the other night."

By now Mom's big package has all but opened itself, and there it is — her very own Meal-O-Matic.

"And the worst job of all — polishing the silver," trills Mom.

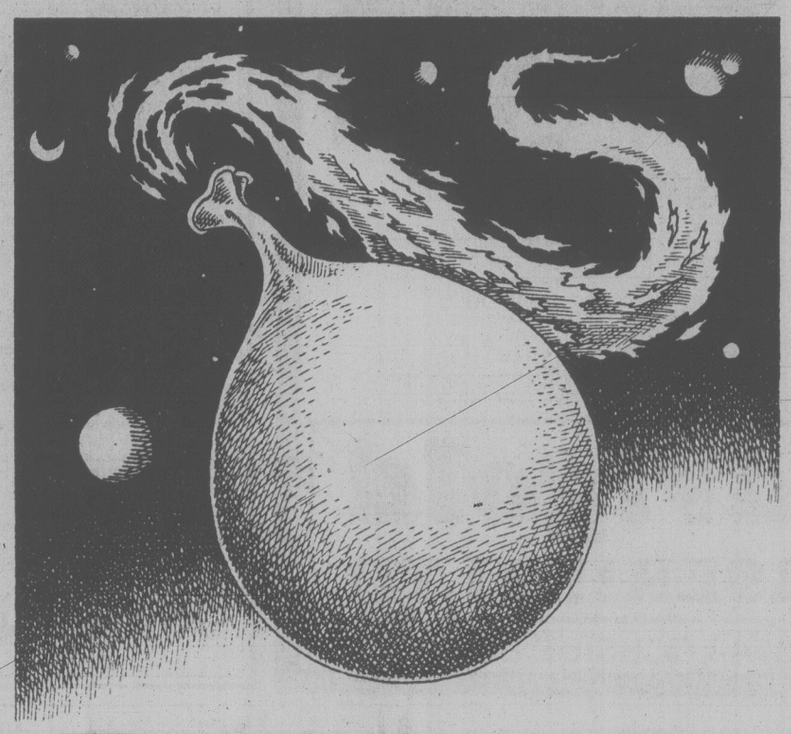

"God bless us, every one," says Johnny.

"And God bless television, for reminding us how desperately we need all the things we can't possibly use."

Velikovsky, star-crossed theoretician of cosmos

By ROBERT JASTROW

(Jastrow is director of NASA's Institute for Space Studies, professor of astronomy at Columbia and professor of earth sciences at Dartmouth. He wrote this for The New York Times).

Immanuel Velikovsky, who died three weeks ago, was a man of extraordinary talents. During his 40 years, he devoted his powers of scholarship and intellect to a remarkable thesis: a few thousand years ago, Venus collided repeatedly with the Earth and Mars, altering the course of history and causing many notable events that are chronicled in the Bible and in legends of ancient peoples.

In one of these collisions, around 1500 B.C., Venus — at that time a comet, not yet a planet — parted the waters for the Children of Israel as they fled the Egyptians. Continuing around the sun, Venus returned to the Earth on a later orbit and collided with it again, stopping the rotation of our planet or tilting the Earth's axis; the effect was to halt the motion of the sun when Joshua said, "Sun, stand thou still."

Still later, Venus crossed the orbit of Mars, pushing it into a collision course with the Earth. Mars came near the Earth several times once on the eve of a battle between the Assyrian King Sennacherib and the soldiers of Judah. A bolt of lightning sprang from Mars, destroying the Assyrian army. Mars also came close to the moon in this period, melting its surface. The last encounter occurred between Mars and the Earth in the eighth century B.C.

These are interesting ideas because they contradict a widely accepted view that the planets have not changed their orbits for millions of years. They also contradict established laws of physics and Newton's theory of gravity.

Dr. Velikovsky was aware of these difficulties. They were the basis for his argument that electrical and magnetic forces may come into play in close encounters between celestial bodies, overwhelming gravity. Since astronomers believe that these forces have no such effect, Dr. Velikovsky's hypothesis made his theory even more radical, exciting and potentially fruitful.

But his ideas were not well received in the scientific community. Scientists described him as a "quack," "charlatan" and "fraud," and his work has been called "rubbish," "nonsense" and "trash." People have received such treatment from scientists before and been right. Alfred Wegener, an early proponent of continental drift, was scoffed at by geologists during his lifetime. Years later it turned out that although his reasoning was wrong, his conclusion was correct. Continents do move about.

Perhaps planets move about, too. The idea is certainly intriguing, and outside the scientific community has attracted many supporters. Dr. Velikovsky's cosmology has been compared favorably with those of Plato, Aquinas, Descartes, Newton and Kant. His supporters have charged that he was never given a fair hearing. Attacks on his work by astronomers have been described as "a disgrace to American science" and "academic ill-temper and abuse."

Who is right? There is no question that Dr. Velikovsky was shabbily treated. Leading American astronomers threatened to boycott the Macmillan Company for publishing his Worlds in Collision, forcing Macmillan to turn the property over to a competitor. Scientific American and the American Philosophical Society published attacks on the theory but refused to print Dr. Velikovsky's rebuttals. Science, the official journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, returned another manuscript to Dr. Velikovsky unopened.

The New York Times said scientists were behaving "as though they have been stung by a hornet from outer space." Some scientists thought their colleagues had gone too far. In 1973, on a proposal from the astronomer Walter Orr Roberts, the A.A.A.S. arranged a panel discussion on the theory of planetary collisions. The panel included five members opposed to the theory and one — Velikovsky — in favor.

Reporters and scientists agreed that Prof. Carl Sagan was the most effective anti-Velikovskian on the panel. Science called Professor Sagan's discourse "amusing and totally devastating." Another panel member said the discussion was "entertaining." A reading of Professor Sagan's paper and the reports on the meeting suggests that the panel and the audience were mocking the 78-year-old man.

Later, Dr. Velikovsky had his day when he spotted a major scientific boner in Professor Sagan's argument. Calculating the probability of several collisions involving Venus, Mars and the Earth, Dr. Sagan estimated 1 chance in 10^{23} (10 followed by 22 zeros) that the collisions could occur. This number was widely quoted by reporters as proof of the absurdity of Velkikovsky's thesis. Professor Sagan's error lay in the assumption that the collisions were independent of one another, so that the probability of a series of collisions would be the product of separate probabilities for each collision. Dr. Velikovsky pointed out that the collisions are not independent; in fact, if two bodies orbiting the sun under the influence of gravity collide once, that encounter enhances the chance of another, a fact well known in celestial mechanics. Professor Sagan's calculations, in effect, ignore the law of gravity. Here Velikovsky was the better astronomer.

Much of the criticism of Velikovsky is better founded. His scientific documentation is drawn to a disturbing degree from discredited measurements and theories, from evidence widely regarded as unreliable, and from statements taken out of context and used misleadingly. An example: "Flies appear (in the fossil record) as the most recent among insect forms." This statement is offered in support of his suggestion that Venus may have been the source of flies plaguing the Egyptians in the time of the Exodus, 3,500 years ago. The fact is that flies are fairly recent arrivals in the fossil record, but they go back at least 100 million years, not 3,500 years. This sort of half-truth drives scientists up the wall.

Still, it may have been Dr. Velikovsky's special genius that he was able to divine the truth although he could not support his insights with convincing evidence. Was Velikovsky right? Did Venus collide with the Earth in historic times?

Three predictions based on the theory have turned out to be correct, and were cited by Velikovsky as strong evidence in its favor. Venus is hot; Jupiter emits radio noise; and the moon's rocks are magnetic.

Numerous other predictions turned out to be false, however. The most important of these is the fact that nothing geologically remarkable happened 3,500 years ago on the Earth or on the moon. The moon was not melted then, and the Earth suffered no disturbances different from those experienced more or less continuously over the past several hundred million years. It would be very interesting if the facts were otherwise; nothing could be more exciting than to witness a revolution of scientific thought in our own lifetime. Unfortunately, the evidence does not support this possibility.

STRAY FEATHERS
Harold Hosford

A busy morning at the feeder

With the days being squeezed at both ends, and the weekends busier than I like, I haven't had a chance to check the goings-on at my bird feeder lately. Other than dropping a can of crushed oats, millet, and sunflower seeds on to the tray in the darkness every morning, the old diner could be out of business as far as I'm concerned.

But it is in business, and the best evidence of that is the clean tray every morning and my wife's occasional reports of "strange sparrows" dropping by. My wife's "strange sparrows" usually turn out to be perfectly ordinary sparrows, but it's as much as our marriage is worth to tell her that.

Well, last Sunday there was — thanks to some squally weather — a break for me; I not only got to stay home but also to sit in on the proceedings at the feeder. The result? Well, I found the old place as busy as ever, receiving an almost continuous procession of birds, a procession even the weather could not stop.

I found, for one thing, that the day starts early at the feeder, usually not long after I leave for work. I also found that the first customers are our resident quail. Their solution to the problem of reaching a tray that is 15 feet above ground is not to fly directly from the ground to the tray but to detour through an oak next door where, after a brief stop while they scramble for a place among the branches, they launch themselves towards the tray.

Some land directly on the tray; others strike for the rail of the sun-deck and walk briskly to the tray.

The whole performance has the air of long practice; traffic jams are rare. Only late-comers get into trouble. They, with the tray already covered with quail, may require some delicate foot and wing work to make a landing. But there's always room for one more, even if it means somebody near the edge gets shunted off.

Now, after watching 17 quail at work for a quarter of an hour, I know why the tray is so clean every morning. Still, after the quail, there's enough to keep a parade of Golden-crowned Sparrows, Juncos, Fox Sparrows, Song Sparrows and Towhees coming.

I figure there are three Towhees — at least that's the most I've seen at one time — which unlike the confident little quail are the epitome of birds with bad cases of "nerves." Whether skulking in the laurel hedge, or waiting atop the fence, the Towhees always act as if they wished they were somewhere else. They're never at ease, jerking nervously this way and that, flitting their tails, and generally looking uneasy.

The Towhees seem to have an agreement that never more than one shall be at the feeder at one time. While one is there — the other two wait their turn, either on the fence or in the hedge.

The bird at the feeder, after having taken what seems like an inordinately long time to pluck up the courage to get there, will stand a moment at the edge of the feeder, cast a wary eye in the direction of the house, and, in a flash of black, white and brown, grab a seed and decamp.

The two waiting must now face the ordeal. After what looks like their version of Laurel and Gaston, one will get the jump and leave the other at the gate. But sometimes their timing is off and both will start together. Then — and I've never been able to figure how they decide the issue — one will turn back, almost turning inside out in its efforts to change direction and get to cover.

From this performance I've concluded that despite their desire for anonymity, those Towhees find something in my offerings that make the rewards worth the risk.

Whatever it is, I'll keep serving it, even though I get my rewards only once in a long time.

B.C. approves 300 beds at lodge

The provincial health ministry has notified the Oak Bay Lodge on Cadboro Bay Road it can expand its 150 long-term care beds to 300.

But deputy regional health officer Dr. Brian Allen said today it will take some time before the lodge can handle the maximum 300 patients.

He said there are now only 120 long-term care patients at the lodge which was formerly the Oak Bay Manor.

Allen said an administrator will have to be appointed and the whole staff reorganized.

Meanwhile, Oak Bay council will hold a public hearing in the municipal hall at 7:30 p.m. Monday on a rezoning bylaw that will allow the expansion.

Oak Bay Mayor Doug Watts said today council has laid down two conditions under which the rezoning can be granted.

One is that the lodge continue to pay taxes and the other is that residents who went to the lodge when it was a retirement home be allowed to continue living there.

Patients with not-so-urgent complaints are forced to wait months for surgery at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General hospitals because facilities to serve the aged are in short supply.

While long waiting lists for elective surgery are fairly common throughout B.C., the problem has been accentuated because of the older-than-average population in Greater Victoria.

With elective surgery taking a back seat to more urgent cases, up to five per cent of operations have to be postponed — a situation which officials say is a worry and disappointment to patients.

At the Victoria General Hospital, medical director Dr. Donald Carlow says there is a backlog of 900 patients awaiting urgent or elective operations. A year ago there were 800 on the waiting list.

An even worse situation is faced at the Royal Jubilee Hospital where, as of Nov. 28, there was a total of 1,188 patients awaiting surgery, 867 of them elective and 321, urgent. On Dec. 7 of 1978 there was a waiting list of 1,067, 843 for elective surgery and 224 urgent cases.

Royal Jubilee has an eight-month waiting list.

At present VGH has 397 beds, with between 70 and 90 occupied by long-term care patients.

At RJH, where the shortage of facilities might be even worse, 114 beds are occupied by long-term care patients.

Residents back Broadmead shopping plaza

Royal Oak area subdivision residents who attended a meeting Thursday at the invitation of Broadmead Farms Ltd. said they are in favor of its plan to build a low-level district shopping centre in the neighborhood, a company spokesman said today.

About 70 of 150 invited residents showed up at the meeting, held in Royal Oak junior secondary school.

A questionnaire was circulated and 40 of 54 people who answered said they would like to see the project approved, according to the company spokesman.

Nine people said no and five were undecided.

Broadmead will present its revised shopping centre proposal to Saanich's advisory planning committee in January.

The shopping centre has been reduced from a 229,000 sq. ft. to 174,000 sq. ft. and Broadmead changed its rezoning application from a regional to district shopping centre.

Under a new Capital Region District definition, a regional centre exceeds 175,000 sq. ft. and needs regional district approval before it can proceed.

A municipal planner's report that stated Royal Oak doesn't need a shopping complex of that size was based on the company's original proposal, the company spokesman said.

That proposal had two phases. The second stage called for two department stores and a total of 411,000 sq. ft.

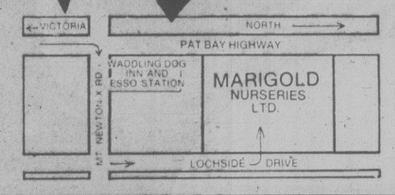

The new proposal is a low-profile building that will not be expanded. It is aimed at middle income families that populate the area, the spokesman said.

He said the centre will include The Bay department store and a mall containing a series of "quality specialty-oriented stores."

"We get tremendous satisfaction from doing our jobs well. It's more than worth the effort we put in."

Suzanne and Larry knew that working as a flight attendant meant more than just "doing a job". They realized it was a career with a lot of responsibility and hard work; that often involved long hours, and would probably mean moving to another city. But they were confident they could meet these challenges. And they were right. A few months after passing three interviews and an intensive training program, Suzanne and Larry were both full-fledged members of our team of professional men and women.

What got them their jobs though, was not simply the fact that they met our basic criteria. Suzanne and Larry are two of those individuals who displayed the important "extras" we look for in candidates. Out-going personalities, pride in their appearance, linguistic skills, a real desire to provide the highest standard of customer service, and the fact that they were self-starters made them stand out during intense competition with other applicants who also met our minimum requirements.

It's people like Suzanne and Larry who make us one of the world's leading airlines. And the rewards of the job—in every sense—make them proud to work with us.

If you think a career as flight attendant offers the kind of challenge and job satisfaction you're looking for, take a close look at the list of minimum requirements listed below. Then, only if you meet them all, write to: Air Canada, Cabin Personnel Employment Office, P.O. Box 11,000, Dorval Airport, Dorval, P.Q. H4Y 1B6.

In return, we'll send you our brochure, together with a detailed application form that lets you tell us what you have to offer. When you return your completed application form, you may wish to enclose your resume or curriculum vitae.

- Canadian citizen or landed immigrant
- High School graduate or equivalent
- Minimum one year permanent work experience, or one year post-secondary education in lieu thereof
- Willing and able to relocate
- High standard of appearance; excellent health and stamina
- Unaided vision should not be below 6/15 (20/50) in each eye. Glasses not permitted. Contact lenses are acceptable provided visual acuity is not weaker than 6/30 (20/100) uncorrected in each eye. You may wish to check with your eye care specialist
- 158.7 cm (5'2")—186.8 cm (6'1") height (without shoes), with weight in proportion

Papa seen vital to rainfall record

Half the world's long-term oceanic rainfall record is supplied by the two Canadian weather ships off Vancouver Island, a former meteorology director says.

But in spite of the unique role filled by the ships, Station Papa is being abandoned.

John Knox, who left his post as regional director of the federal Atmospheric Environment Service to return to university, spoke at the Institute of Ocean Sciences on the subject, Precipitation Over the Northeast Pacific Ocean. The seminar was sponsored by the V.I. section of the Canadian Meteorological and Oceanographic Society.

The weather ships Quadra and Vancouver, which rotate tours of duty 700 miles at sea, are to be withdrawn permanently within two years, ending a continuous weather monitoring role which began in 1951. They cost $6 million a year to operate.

The only other oceanic precipitation station with such a long record is a ship manned by Norway in the North Atlantic, Knox said.

Land stations are situated in 200,000 places around the globe, which compared with the two seaward points creates a striking uneveness in measurement which Knox said "seems quite incredible."

Meteorological scientists since the late-19th century have tried to produce maps of global precipitation, including the oceans, based on the merest knowledge of actual rainfall at sea, Knox said.

But it is even more remarkable that the long-term accuracy represented by continuous observations at Station Papa has been largely ignored in the latest attempts to produce maps of North Pacific precipitation.

For one thing, Knox said, previous estimates of northeast Pacific rainfall have been grossly overestimated at around 2,000 mm. a year, when in fact the weather ship record shows less than half that amount, or little more than falls in a year on Victoria.

For the 20 years between 1954 and 1974 on Station Papa average annual precipitation was 683 mm., compared with 2,415 at Prince Rupert, 1,068 at Vancouver and 657 at Victoria.

The latter was surprising, Knox said, because of the ships' more exposed location and more vigorous storms. It illustrates the "enormous importance of orography," the study of mountains with relation to their effect on weather.

Knox suggested there was also a difference in how hard, how long and how frequently the rain falls in Victoria compared with Station Papa.

He urged the station's rainfall readings be taken seriously — "though God knows how much longer we'll have them — and that atlases should be altered to conform" to them."

Although scientists on the West Coast generally agree that the ships should be maintained because of the value and variety of oceanographic and meteorological data they supply, others think the money they cost would be better spent elsewhere in the scientific community, Knox said.

Not all the functions now performed by the Quadra and Vancouver can be duplicated by other means. For example, Knox said, there is no other way of sounding the upper Pacific atmosphere with balloon-borne radiosondes than by having a station at sea.

Feds rap doctor's procedure

The criticism was contained in a letter about Pickup to the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons a few days after the Oct. 26 death of Elizabeth Robertson from a drug overdose.

Dr. Victor Raz, assigned to oversee medical care for Indians at this small community on northwest Vancouver Island, said the letter was written by Dr. Gordon Butler, the department's director of medical services for B.C.

BCGEU 'Scrooge' crisis over

It may not have ended like the Dickens' classic but the B.C. Government Employees Union has reached agreement with the man some were calling a modern-day Scrooge — Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe — over who should work on Dec. 24.

The union was threatening to tell its 40,000 members to take the day off — a Monday which would have given workers a five-day holiday — if certain ministries decided to give staff a day or half a day off.

General-secretary John Fryer said the matter was resolved at a meeting with Wolfe Thursday.

"Nobody is getting it off as a holiday other then these people that may have scheduled it as part of their annual vacation," he said.

"So nobody will get Dec. 24 off as a holiday which is the position that's acceptable to the union. Either everybody gets it or nobody."

Fryer doesn't expect the government to break the agreement, but if it is, he said, the entire union membership will just go home.

Lack of boat inspection blamed

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Inspection of old boats might have prevented the loss of the fishboat Salinta with 10 aboard 75 miles north of here, a union spokesman said Thursday.

Joy Thorkelson, northern organizer for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union here, said the 10 lives might have been spared aboard the fishing boat Salinta had there been regular safety inspections of small fishing vessels.

A Worker's Compensation Board spokesman, Grant McMillan, said there was a lack of inspection of old boats like the Salinta although the matter had been discussed between the board and the federal government during the last three to four years.

Weather and sea conditions Thurday again prevented RCMP divers from continuing the search for six persons still missing.

Fisherman Roy Mostad set out Dec. 2 with nine others — including seven children — in his 10-metre boat. It was found smashed on a beach a week later with four bodies aboard.

Pipe admitted illegal

PORT ANGELES (AP) — Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Corp. has acknowledged its proposed oil port and pipeline near here are illegal under local comprehensive land-use plans.

But that does not mean the project is dead.

The company's admission came in the first day of a hearing on Trans Mountain's compliance with local land-use and zoning regulations.

The hearing was held by the Washington State Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council, which, by law, must determine whether an energy project is consistent with local ordinances before it makes a recommendation to the governor.

The council contends it can preempt local regulations if a project isn't in compliance.

The proposed oil port site is at Low Point, in unincorporated Clallam County, about 27 kilometres east of Port Angeles. Both the Clallam County and Port Angeles long-range development guides ban major oil projects.

Divorced wife keeps winnings, court rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who went to court to claim a half-interest in his divorced wife's $100,000 lottery winnings saw his application dismissed Thursday.

Travel agent Urbano Bernardis, 43, made an ex-parte application also seeking a court order preserving the assets held by his divorced wife, Laura Celina Bernardis, whose ticket was drawn in the Oct. 31 Western Express lottery.

County court Judge J. P. van der Hoop said the wife would have to be served with notice of the proceedings and be represented.

Bernardis said in his petition that his wife left him in August and that they were divorced in November.

Heroin challenge

VANCOUVER (CP) — An ad hoc committee fighting the B.C. government's compuslory heroin treatment program is challenging a coroner's finding that a heroin addict died of a heart attack last month.

The committee has asked Health Minister Rafe Mair to investigate charges that Ron Spence, 44, of Vancouver died after failing to receive adequate medical treatment at the Brannan Lake centre near Nanaimo.

Spence died in Nanaimo Regional Hospital Nov. 3, a short time after being removed from the centre because of illness. He had been receiving treatment for his addiction since Oct. 11.

No testing funds

The provincial health ministry does not have any money to test mother's milk for polychlorinated biphenyls, Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said Thursday. Hanson said ministry staff is seeking lottery funds to conduct a province-wide test of milk for levels of the toxic chemical.

Huge helicopter

RICHMOND (CP) — Highland Helicopters Ltd. has placed an order for the world's largest twin-engine commercial helicopter capable of lifting an external load of 28,000 pounds and carrying 44 passengers. Delivery is due in May, 1982. he $12 million helicopter could be used by the forest or pipeline industry in B.C.

Arsonist blamed

KELOWNA (CP) — RCMP said Thursday that an arsonist started a $2 million fire at Kelowna Secondary School on Wednesday in which a 11-year-old girl was severely injured. Cynthia Onyschuk, a cerebral palsy student in a class for slow learners, was flown to Vancouver from this Okanagan city for emergency treatment and is in poor condition at Vancouver General Hospital suffering second-degree burns to 60 per cent of her body and smoke inhalation.

Broadcast trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten Vancouver-area television and radio stations and several executives of those stations have been committed for higher court trial on charges under the federal Combines Act. The charges allege that between June 30, 1976, and Dec. 1, 1977, the companies and six executives conspired to prevent or lessen competition in advertising sales.

MLA sells firm

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Social Credit MLA Bill Ritchie and his business partner Dave Smith have sold their agricultural feed firm in this Fraser Valley municipality. Ritchie, MLA for Central Fraser Valley, said the reason for the sale is to allow him to devote his full time to politics and so that Smith, an animal nutritionist, can retire.

Jingle bells.

Before Christmas. Or after. And avoid the rush.

Christmas is a season. Not just a day.

So spread the joy of Christmas by placing your long distance calls throughout the Yuletide.

That way, you can be sure of getting through. And you'll avoid the rush.

Some telephone tips for the holiday season.

Dial calls yourself. Direct dialing (112) is usually the cheapest way to place your calls.

Long Distance Directory Assistance. If you don't know the distant number, you can get it at no charge by calling Long Distance Directory Assistance. But please do so a few days in advance.

For calls within B.C.: DIAL 112-555-1212.

For overseas numbers: JUST DIAL "0".

Take advantage of discount periods. Most calls within B.C. that you dial yourself (112) are cheaper all day Saturday and Sunday, each evening after 5 p.m. and cheaper still between 11 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Calls outside B.C. are cheaper all day Sunday, each evening after 6 p.m. and cheaper still between midnight and 8 a.m.

Overseas. Save 25% on most overseas calls all day Sunday. And if you call Great Britain, Italy, Israel, France and Ireland, you can save 25% off the weekday rate between 5 p.m. on Friday and 5 a.m. on Monday. Check your directory for details or ask your Operator.

Use time zones to your advantage. If you call before 8 a.m. (our cheapest time for most calls), it's already ...d morning in Eastern Canada.

Keep emergency numbers handy. Over the holiday period it may take a bit longer to reach our Operators. Save precious seconds; dial safety agencies direct.

For more information on discount periods, area codes and Long Distance Directory Assistance, please check your directory.

Desmarais corporate king

OTTAWA (UPC) — The financial interests of Paul Desmarais constitute the largest enterprise in Canada with control of 195 corporations, according to Statistics Canada.

Among the best-known holdings of the financier, who started as a university student taking over a bankrupt bus company in Sudbury, Ont., are Power Corporation, Canada Steamship Lines and Consolidated Bathurst.

Other holdings include Investors Group, Laurentide Financial Corp., Bathurst Paper, Voyageur, Montreal Trust and Investors Syndicate.

Second on the list of intercorporate ownership on July 1 was the Canadian-controlled Weston interests, with over 160 corporations such as Eddy Paper, B.C. Packers, Loblaw Companies, Weston Bakeries, Kelly Douglas and Co. and Westfair Foods, the government statistics agency said Thursday.

The Irving group, controlling 140 corporations, grew by 20 since the last survey was published in March 1978, Statistics Canada said. They include Key Anacon Mines, Irving Oil, Moncton Publishing, University Press of New Brunswick, Irving Steamships, St. John Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. and St. George Pulp and Paper.

The government agency would not release the value of the holdings, saying that information was confidential. Some interests, such as the Eaton family holdings, are private and profit figures are never released.

Control was defined as more than 50 percent of the corporation or interlocking directorships that give one group controlling interest.

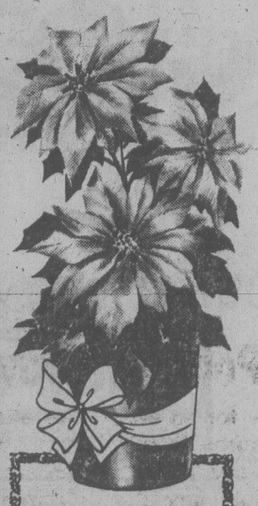

Fourth on the list of Canada's largest enterprises was Edper Investments Ltd., the Bronfman family holding company that has grown rapidly to control of 105 corporations through the take-over of Brascan and Trizec Corp.

The next largest was Cemp Investments, which heads a conglomerate of more than 100 corporations including Cadillac Fairview, Seagram Co., Multiple Access, G.M. Resources, Texas Pacific Oil Co. Inc.

Among other large holdings was the Conrad Black group, controlling Argus Corp., Warspite Corp., Ravelston Corp., Hollinger Argus, Dominion Stores, Standard Broadcasting, General Bakeries and Bushnell Communications.

$500,000 fraud real con game

MONTREAL (CP) — A nationwide arrest warrant has been issued for a man who police say has defrauded Canadians out of more than $500,000 by offering for sale a non-existent computerized backgammon and chess game.

The man, who has been using the name of Brian Gould, left Montreal on Nov. 26 just before an investigation was opened by officers of the Montreal police force's economic and commercial fraud section. Police said he was last heard from in Vancouver.

Full-page newspaper advertisements were placed in most major newspapers in the country but the promised electronic games were not delivered to people who sent in the required $62.45.

Labor declares war on Buchanan government

HALIFAX (CP) — About 400 unionists, chants of "the bill must go" and "down with Streatch" booming off the concrete buildings that line Hollis St. here, marched on the Nova Scotia legislature today and demanded withdrawal of labor legislation it terms facist and dictatorial.

Told Premier John Buchanan was not in his office or elsewhere in Province House, seat of the legislature, president Gerald Yetman of the 70,000-member Nova Scotia legislature presented to Attorney-General Harry How an action plan authorized at an emergency convention Thursday night to fight the Trade Union Act amendments.

The plan calls for a total break with the Buchanan government if the legislation is passed, as well as other measures that could include a general strike in the province.

The 350-400 delegates attending the convention gave unanimous approval to the plan, which includes a mandate for the executive of the federation to call a general strike at any time.

The convention heard Donald Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, define the confrontation with government as a "battle of the ballot box."

Yetman, introducing Montgomery, said members of Parliament seeking election following the defeat of the federal Progressive Conservative government should be asked "where the hell they stand on the Michelin bill."

Montgomery picked up the theme, telling delegates "what you have to do is rally behind the NDP and get them in office. Turn the rascals out. . . they're business oriented. . . just like the late, demented Joe Clark."

Singing union solidarity songs and calling for the downfall of the Buchanan government and the resignation of Labor Minister Ken Streatch, the group than paraded through the heart of the downtown business district to the legislature.

When Buchanan's office staff said he was out, Yetman presented the action plan to How as chairman of the Law Amendments Committee, currently hearing public representations on the bill.

Labor supporters filled the galleries as the committee assembled for the second day in succession in the main legislative chamber because the Red Chamber, where it normally sits, could not handle the crowd.

One elderly member of the group in the galleries, wagging an accusing finger at government members, said a Tory government had precipitated the Great Depression in 1929 and Tories were still mishandling the economy 50 years later.

Yetman pleaded with How that the government not force labor to implement the action plan by proceeding with the bill. He has said consistently that he hopes the government is not "stupid enough" to bring on a general strike.

He said Thursday night that, despite the mandate, no province-wide strike is imminent.

Energy beef still grazing

ATLANTA, Ga. (CP) — The chairman of Imperial Oil Ltd. said Wednesday that much of Canada's energy reserve is like beef on the hoof — it's a long way from the table.

But Jack Armstrong of Toronto said the energy future for Canadians holds tremendous promise and he thinks their goal of energy self-sufficiency by the end of the century is worth shooting for.

"Canada has been blessed with such an abundance of natural resources that in the long run, it surely must be beyond the means of any mortal to make a mess of things," he told a seminar on Canada in the 1980s. "But it will be some time before we can take full advantage of it."

Armstrong told an audience of about 100 Americans, many of them businessmen, that the constraints on energy development in Canada include problems of financing, economics, technology, the environment and politics.

He noted that creating a plant to extract 125,000 barrels of oil daily from the Alberta oil sands — the equivalent of about one per cent of Saudi Arabia's daily production — took five years of construction and $6 billion

He estimated that drawing 15 million barrels of oil daily from the oil shale in Colorado by the year 2000 would cost $700 billion in 1979 dollars. And it would provide only 50 per cent of U.S. oil requirements.

Armstrong said that in the coming decade, Canada will have to rely on imported oil since new sources of oil are not being discovered fast enough. And by the turn of the century, he said, Canada will still be dependant on crude oil and natural gas for about half its energy supply.

Armstrong also said e has no objection to the energy bank proposed by Canadian government, as long as the money is used to develop future energy supplies.

"But if federal officials start rinky-dinking that money into social programs with the name energy conservation or some such thing, I think they're due for some criticism."

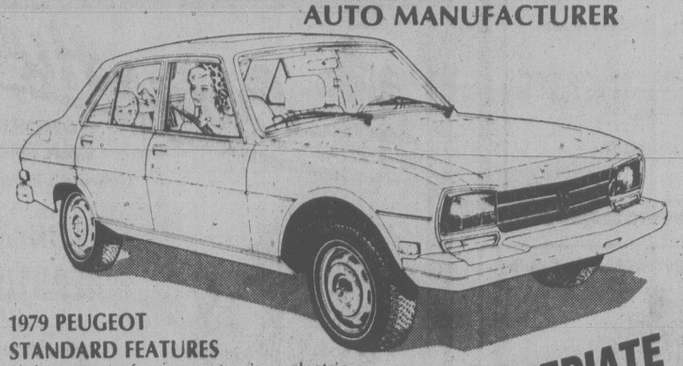

The seminar was sponsored by the Canadian consulate and the Niagara Institute, a private organization based in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont.

Appeal court quashes PQ Asbestos grab

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal ordered the provincial government not to expropriate the assets of Asbestos Corp. Ltd. Thursday, decisively blocking a Parti Quebecois plan to take over the major fibre exporter by January.

Three appeals judges decided unanimously to issue an injunction that bars the cabinet from launching an expropriation until the courts have handed down a "final judgment" on the company's separate constitutional challenge to the PQ's special expropriation act.

The injunction — thought to be the first ever issued directly against a government in Canada — blocks a forcible takeover at least until the constitutional case is decided in January or February by a lower court. Appeals of that judgment could delay a "final" decision for up to two years. This would force the government to call off its takeover campaign, or to revive private purchase talks with the company's American multinational parent, General Dynamics Corp.

Government lawyers may look for another way out by asking the Supreme Court of Canada to hear an appeal against the injunction. No decision was taken Thursday.

The appeals judges concluded that the government could not enforce the terms of the expropriation law because it was passed in French only, under the unconstitutional sections of Bill 101. The court said it had awaited the Supreme Court ruling to issue the injunction, because of the importance of the language issue.

Both decisions, grouped together and partially blocking the PQ government's nationalist policies, provides the party with grist for the mill in the campaign for Quebec sovereignty.

Yves Berube, the boss of expropriation as natural resources minister, opened fire within hours. Both decisions again show that Quebecers and their government are cornered "by a majority that is not ours" in Confederation, he told the national assembly.

"Expropriation never seemed unconstitutional to us."

Quebec revamps language laws

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill creating 31 new bilingual laws to retroactively replace 311 laws passed in French only was adopted unanimously by the Quebec national assembly at 6:28 a.m. EST today, following eight hours of debate.

The law was made necessary Thursday when the Supreme Court of Canada ruled unconstitutional sections of Quebec's Charter of the French Language making French the official language of the national assembly and courts.

It also gives quasi-judicial bodies, municipalities and school commissions the power to act in the same way to re-enact their bylaws and regulations in French and English.

Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard said these bodies could be affected by the Supreme Court's ruling and added that this step was taken as a measure of "prudence."

They are not obliged to do so by the special law, but Bedard said the court's ruling creates a doubt regarding their validity, adding that this could cause them "enormous difficulties and expenses."

He did not say how much it could cost to translate all the regulations and bylaws passed since Confederation in 1867.

After the law was adopted, government House leader Claude Charron re-introduced all bills currently before the national assembly in both French and English, in conformity with the law's terms.

Henceforth, all Quebec laws must be adopted in both French and English, as they were before Aug. 26, 1977, when the language charter — better known as Bill 101 — was passed.

In striking down sections of the charter dealing with the courts and the national assembly, the high court did not rule on other sections of the law, aimed at making French the everyday working language of Quebec.

FP deal schism grows

TORONTO (CP) — As shareholders of FP Publications Ltd. meet in Toronto, sides are being drawn on the question of whether to accept Conrad Black and his associates' $100-million bid for the publishing company.

A lawyer for the Sifton family, which owns 22.5 per cent of the shares, said his clients "are not interested in Mr. Black's offer and have instructed the trustees of the estate to that effect."

He added that if the trustees decide to sell in contravention of the family's wishes, "an application to the court will be made."

Reports from Montreal say the McConnell family, who through Starlaw Investments Ltd. own 25 per cent of the shares, is interested in selling because it no longer has an emotional attachment to the chain.

The family of the late Max Bell, former chairman of the board of FP, owns 10.4 per cent of the company and says it might sell.

Paul Bell said he and his three sisters would consider selling "if the price is right."

FP owns The Globe and Mail, Ottawa Journal, Winnipeg Free Press, Calgary Albertan, Lethbridge Herald, Victoria Colonist, Victoria Times and Vancouver Sun, published for Pacific Press which is owned jointly by FP and Southam.

The other major parties concerned — R. Howard Webster, chairman of The Globe and Mail, and Richard Malone, a trustee of both the Sifton and Bell estates — have not yet defined their positions.

Black, chairman of giant Argus Corp., made the offer which is reported to have a Monday deadline.

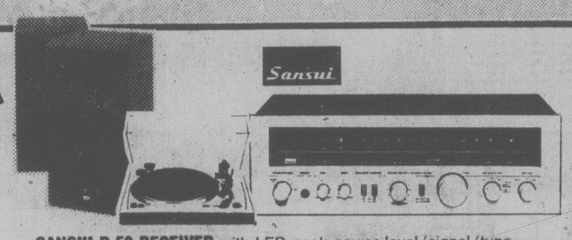

Meanwhile, the Sifton family's lawyer disputed other reports saying the family would be willing to participate with employees of The Globe and Mail in a separate bid for that paper.

Off-duty grown fuzz okay

Saanich police officers who want to grow beards will have to do it on their own time, the police board decided Thursday.

The board approved a set of grooming standards contained in a five-month committee study that says beards are okay if grown off duty.

Saanich and Central Saanich are the only two municipal police forces in Canada that allow beards.

Full beards are the only ones allowed on the faces of the 115 member force and they must be nurtured on an officer's own time.

Deputy chief Rick Avision told Couvelier it means officers must take holidays to grow beards.

The grooming guidelines have been approved by the Saanich police union and the officers will make sure there aren't any violations, Avison said.

Police Chief Robert Peterson said trying to impose those kind of rules on officers could result in a human rights battle.

The other standards say men's hair must be neatly groomed and styled and not longer than mid-collar at the back.

Hair must be without "excessive flair," the rules say.

At the sides, hair must not hang below mid-ear level and sideburns must be square cut and no lower than the bottom of the earlobe.

Women's hair must not be long than the tip of the clavicle when standing.

If an officer fails to comply with standards when asked by the association he can be disciplined by the chief.

Couvelier said he will bring before council Monday the police board's request for $3,600 so members can travel to Eastern Canada to look at new police buildings.

Peterson said there is no department money available for the four-man information gathering mission east to look at police quarters in Ontario and Saskatchewan.

The police board wants the information for a report on the need for a new police building. The board has been saying for months the present facilities are cramped and there is no room for expansion.

Peterson has suggested the department be relocated in the Lakehill area of the municipality.

Police seek witnesses to accident

Esquimalt police are seeking witnesses to an accident in the 1200-block Esquimalt Road about 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

A police spokesman said today he was injured by a car while in a crosswalk with a pedestrian-controlled stoplight.

Police said there are conflicting reports on what color the light was at the time of the accident.

Anyone who saw the accident is asked to call Esquimalt police, 385-1441.

Canadian guilty, jury finds

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (UPI) — Stephen Conrad Jones, 16, of Port Alberni, has been found guilty of second-degree murder and faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

The Canadian broke into tears Thursday night when a Clallam County Superior Court jury returned its guilty verdict.

The youth was convicted of the fatal stabbing of Dudley Bates, 31, Port Angeles, last Aug. 20.

Jones said he stabbed the man in self-defence, but the jurors gave greater weight to the fact that Bates had been stabbed nine times.

80 flee rising creek

MISSION (CP) — About 80 people living on two Indian reserves near this Fraser Valley community had to be evacuated today after the rising Sisan Creek overflowed onto the reserves.

An RCMP spokesman said the evacuation started about 2:30 a.m. PST after the water began flooding homes on the reserve. A log jam apparently blocked the creek, forcing the water over the banks.

There were no injuries, but "there was some danger," said spokesman Vern Walt.

"The (RCMP) members out there told me the water was up to their waists in some cases."

He said the people evacuated, residents of the neighboring Scowlitz and Skwakam reserves, are being billeted in Mission.

The flooding, sparked by steady rainfall in the past 24 hours, also forced closure of the Lougheed Highway, about 25 kilometres east of Mission.

Crews from the department of highways were on the scene, but it was not known when the highway would be reopened.

Witnesses describe slapping

Two witnesses told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Thursday that George Ronald Wyatt, 42, was involved in physical incidents with Charles Devine, 46, on March 16 and 18.

Lori Benzie, 20, and Moira McArthur, 21, were testifying in the third day of the trial of Wyatt, accused of second-degree murder of Devine who was found dead on the morning of March 19.

McArthur, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, who has lived common-law with Wyatt for nine years, said she visited their Esquimalt Road apartment on the afternoon of March 16.

She said her mother was very drunk, Wyatt and Devine were drunk, and Douglas Wootton was drunk but still had his wits about him.

There was conversation about Vietnam and as Devine tried to say something Wyatt told him to shut up, that he didn't know what he was talking about, grabbed the front of his shirt, pushed him back in his chair and slapped him gently with the front and back of his hand across the shoulder.

She said Wootton grabbed Wyatt's hand and told him to "keep it chilly," meaning calm down.

Before the incident, she said Wyatt told her in the bedroom that he didn't like the idea of Devine spending so much time at the apartment while he was away at sea.

She and two friends, one of them Benzie, visited the apartment at 1.30 a.m. March 18. She said she had drunk about four beer that evening while celebrating her birthday.

When they arrived, McArthur said her mother was very drunk, Wyatt and Devine were drunk, and Wootton had been drinking but wasn't drunk and could talk and stand.

After half an hour's conversation, Devine went to give her a birthday kiss and Wyatt got mad and told him to leave his daughter alone, grabbed and pushed him against a wall and slapped him once across the shoulder with an open hand. Wootton again tried to calm Wyatt.

There was more conversation and a suggestion that Devine play some tape music for McArthur's birthday. Wyatt got mad at Devine's noise and inability to put a tape on, she said, and pushed him against the wall.

Devine fell on his hands and knees and she went into the kitchen to calm her mother. She said she never saw Wootton hit anyone.

On the evening of the day Devine was found dead on the living room floor, McArthur said she visited the apartment. Wyatt and her mother were drunk. She at first said Wootton didn't seem drunk, then said he was drunk, adding it was hard to tell because he handled liquor well.

Wootton, she said, seemed very uptight. He got hostile and defensive about conversation about Vietnam, where he served. He said he thought Devine had had a heart attack, a comment he repeated the next day when he also appeared uptight.

There had been previous conversations about Vietnam and Wootton would say that it was a hard emotional experience which never left his mind. He seemed proud of the fact he served there.

Wyatt, she said, was upset at Devine's death and was crying. She knew both men were friends and Wyatt was trying to get Devine a job.

Benzie testified she accompanied McArthur and another person to the apartment between 1 and 1.30 a.m. March 18. She said she drank four beer that evening.

She described Mrs. Thompson as very drunk, Wyatt and Devine as drunk, and couldn't say if Wootton was drunk but he was drinking. The first three didn't make much sense in drunken conversation.

When Devine tried to give McArthur a birthday kiss, Benzie said Wyatt told Devine to leave his daughter alone, grabbed him by the collar and pushed him against the wall, slapping him twice with his open hand and Devine's head hit the wall. They were fairly strong blows. Then Wootton told Wyatt to settle down.

About half an hour to three quarters of an hour later, someone asked Devine to put on some tape music but he couldn't put the tape on and Wyatt told him if he couldn't operate the machine to leave it alone, and threw him against the wall.

7 years for coke importer

A 33-year-old man was given the mandatory minimum of seven years in the penitentiary Thursday by Victoria county court Judge Peter Millward for importing eight ounces of cocaine said to be worth $50,000.

Kenneth Malcolm McLeod pleaded guilty to the offence which occurred Jan. 19 when his bags were searched at Victoria International Airport after his arrival from Seattle.

Millward also tacked on another year for a separate offence of possession of cocaine, said to be worth $1,500, for the purpose of trafficking Dec. 4 in Victoria to which McLeod also pleaded guilty.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old city man convicted of his fifth offence this year was jailed 11 months Thursday by Judge Fred Green in provincial court.

Michael Joseph Poulliotte, 739 Goldstream, was sentenced for a Nov. 22 break-in at Millo's Restaurant, 716 Burdett.

Court was told an alarm was tripped at the Greek restaurant about 3 a.m. and a witness saw two men running from the premises, one with a case of beer.

Victoria police staked out the area and at 5 a.m. Poulliotte and another youth returned to where some stolen goods were stashed.

Poulliotte, who was denied bail Nov. 28 and subsequently pleaded guilty to the breaking and entering charge, was convicted of possession of marijuana March 2 and May 22 this year, receiving a suspended sentence and three months probation the first time and seven days in jail the second occasion.

He also was convicted Aug. 17 this year for trafficking in marijuana and given two months, and on Sept. 14 for breaking and entering when he received a three-month sentence and a year's probation. Poulliotte was released from jail Nov. 13, only nine days before the break-in at Millo's.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Jody Coward, 10150 Third Street in Sidney, was stopped about 8:30 p.m. Nov. 17 for speeding near the Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

Central Saanich police learned that Coward was under suspension because of convictions last year for two offences: impaired driving on June 1 when he was fined $400, and refusing a breath test demand Oct. 16.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Roger Howard Perry, 35, of 2364 Amelia, $500; Ian Christopher Witter, 20, of 5870 Pat Bay Highway, $400; Stephen Thomas Weber, 27, of 4028 Quadra, $400; and Gilbert McGeachie, 19, of 2292 Henry Avenue in Sidney, $350.

In addition, Weber was fined $150 for driving while under suspension.

CLUES ACROSS

4 CRACK not track. The Olympics involve the best (i.e., CRACK) athletes, not track ones specifically.

7 ENGAGED not enraged. The clue implies that the representative still wants to see the buyer; however, this is doubtful in the case of enraged.

10 DOING not going. "Remorse" links up with sin or crime, which is understood as wrong DOING. "Going wrong" can well take the meaning of merely blundering.

14 ANY not and. To give to a charitable cause is to help, so it is somewhat inapt to say "give and" (i.e., also) help.

15 DAMS not dais. A dais is simply a more or less raised platform; there is no particular practical sufficiency of height that it needs to have.

17 SEW not hew. It is to chop wood, say, rather than vaguely to "hew," that is understood to be a "job" of some sort. "SEW" is more satisfactorily in this way.

18 MEDAL not pedal. The clue envisages that "it" might "fall off," as could happen to a badly attached MEDAL. The idea of a bicycle pedal simply falling off is just too incredible.

23 MATCHED not patched. "Badly" MATCHED, yes; but curtains that are patched at all are not exactly ideal anyway.

CLUES DOWN

1 INSOLENCE not indolence. Aptly, there can in some cases by a certain special ease, or something akin to an exercise of wit, about INSOLENCE; however, There can be nothing remotely comparable to a "gift" or talent in mere indolence.

2 BANNER not manner. Aptly, a BANNER can, by its wording, clearly and specifically decry authority. A manner can, in itself, only be more or less aggressive in a general sort of way.

6 CONTENTED not consented. Having consented, he might want to go back on it.

8 DAD not day. To "pursue healthy outdoor activities etc." is broader in scope than what a youngster might do on just one fine day.

11 COAT not boat. The clue strikes a note of reassurance which is hardly called for in the case of a boat, which is made to get wet.

12 RUST not dust. Since no imaginable amount of dust will harm heavy machinery, it is not merely "a certain" limited amount of dust that such machinery can withstand.

19 MAD not bad. MAD is the more reasonable answer, since, in the other case, the clue would suggest that only one type of murder or murderer is really bad.

New E & N safety survey futile, says Cooper

Another safety survey of the E&N Railway's trackage may be an exercise in futility without authority to set minimum standards, transportation critic John Cooper said today.

The chairman of the E&N Railway steering committee was commenting on an inspection ordered by the Canadian Transport Commission's safety and standards committee.

It will cover Vancouver Island trackage where four derailments have occurred since October.

An inspection of the system will take place next month, said Port Alberni Conservative MP Ted Miller, who informed the commission of the unusual number of freight train accidents there had been.

Miller said the committee told him to seek comment from municipalities and regional districts served by the railway pending the inspection by one or more engineers who will come to the island in January.

"If the terms of reference are the same as in the past, I don't know how meaningful it's going to be," said Cooper.

"We've already been this route before this year."

Cooper said since there are no standards which the railway company must meet, it is not possible to order upgrading.

The committee is empowered only to set speed limits for trains using sections of the right of way in a state of deterioration, Cooper said.

It does not have the power to order minimum standards of upkeep.

"This is a matter that has to be dealt with by Parliament," Cooper said, noting that statutory steps had to be taken to achieve right of way standards in the U.S.

Miller said the CTC safety committee was not aware of the recent rash of derailments — near Duncan, near Nanaimo and on the Port Alberni branch.

$10,000 grant and that's it

A grant of $10,000 from B.C. Lotteries has bailed out the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons, but Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe says it's the last money the group can expect from that source.

News of the grant and its finality came Wednesday through society co-ordinator Judith Armstrong.

Contract Bridge — B. Jay Becker

The question is whether to open one notrump or one of a suit in each of the following five hands. All of them come from world championship matches, and the same opening bid was made at each table. As dealer, what would you bid in each case?

1. ♠ AQ543 ♡ Q2 ◇ J105 ♣ AK7
2. ♠ AJ8 ♡ A108 ◇ AQ109 ♣ K106
3. ♠ A3 ♡ AQ75 ◇ KQ654 ♣ K7
4. ♠ A10 ♡ Q82 ◇ KJ83 ♣ AQ106
5. ♠ K7 ♡ J54 ◇ AQ1098 ♣ AQ7

1. One spade. You have 16 high-card points and balanced distribution but, even so, it's better to start with one spade. That is what the Italian and American players both did when they held the hand.

One notrump is defective for several reasons. In general, it is undesirable to open one notrump holding a five-card major suit. It is permissible if that is the best bid available, but if you also lack stoppers in two of the side suits it is better to bid the major suit.

2. One diamond. If you count your high-card values here in the usual way, the total comes to 18 points. But if you regard your tens, nines and eights as worth something extra, your hand rises in value to about 19 or 20 ordinary points. The hand therefore is too strong for one notrump and should be opened one diamond instead. You plan to jump to two notrump if partner responds one heart or one spade.

3. One diamond. Here it is best to start with one diamond, planning to bid hearts next. By bidding the suits in reverse order, you indicate more diamonds than hearts and 17 or more high-card points. Since such a sequence reflects an accurate picture of your actual values, you should adopt it.

4. One notrump. This time an opening notrump bid is almost mandatory. It tells partner, in two words, that you have 16, 17 or 18 points, notrump distribution (usually 4-3-3-3 or 4-4-3-2, but sometimes 5-3-3-2), and strength or stoppers in at least three suits. An opening club or diamond bid would not describe either your high-card values or your distribution nearly as well as an opening notrump bid.

5. One notrump. It is better here also to open one notrump and thus tell partner, with reasonable accuracy, the type of hand you actually have. If you were to open one diamond, you would run into a rebid problem if partner responded either one heart, one spade, one notrump or two clubs. Any rebid you made would be either an overbid, an underbid, or a misbid. You can avoid creating such problems for yourself by opening one notrump.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"See that car ahead," said Paul. "I just figured out something on its licence number. They must be tourists."

Martha laughed. "Obviously, but let's have it anyway."

"Okay, it's quite simple," her husband replied. "It's exactly eight times the square of its last pair of digits."

Thanks to Richard Killey, Flin Flon, Manitoba.

Bennett still mum on Campbell's future

Campbell is under fire for his handling of Social Credit campaign funds in the May 10 election.

Bennett met reporters but would not discuss Campbell's situation, saying he has not yet spoken to Socrred campaign chairman Les Peterson.

Peterson revealed two days ago that Campbell failed to report, as required by law, $65,000 in campaign expenses for which he was personally responsible as campaign mansger.

Bennett said he will coment on the matter when he has all the information he needs.

"There is no sense being premature," he said.

He would not say when a statement can be expected but he indicated it will be soon.

"I more than anyone want to see some clarity in this matter," he said.

Bennett said he has spoken to Campbell but he would not reply directly when asked if Campbell is thinking of resigning. His response: "I'll be talking to him again."

Campbell's new boss, Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom, also refused comment today on Campbell's future.

Attorney-General Allan Williams has asked his staff to advise him whether there was any breach of the Elections Act by the Social Credit party.

Williams has said if there has been a breach of the act, "the law will be enforced fully."

The act provides penalties of a fine up to $1,000 or six months in jail for such an offence.

Meanwhile, there has been a call by the Socred party's former executive director for Bennett to fire his three senior aides.

The premier must also break his silence over the entire dirty tricks affair and the latest election spending disclosures, Jim Gilchrist said in an interview.

Gilchrist said the premier should fire Campbell, a senior government aide and party campaign manager, senior aide Dave Brown and Glen Mitchell, former caucus staff head and now assistant to Universities Minister Pat McGeer.

Gilchrist said the party faithful is becoming tired of the continuing controversy surrounding the so-called dirty tricks, phoney letters and campaign funds.

"The premier keeps hedging on the whole deal. The best thing he can do is come out and make some kind of statement.

"The general feeling is that people are fed up and want something done quickly. Every day we find something new developing.

Party president Bernie Smith said the party executive had nothing to do with the unreported campaign expenses which were not declared until Wednesday.

Franklin's seaworthiness praised by Coast Guard

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Franklin, Canada's newest icebreaker and based at St. John's, relies more on a cutting edge than brute force to do her job and Canadian Coast Guard officials are anxious to demonstrate the vessel's capabilities.

Lorne Humphries, the coast guard's regional director for Newfoundland, said in an interview Thursday the 8,180-ton Franklin had already shown her seaworthiness in a gale off Newfoundland while en route to St. John's from Victoria via the Panama Canal.

Asked about local reports which said the vessel did not behave well in seas kicked up by 70-knot winds off Cape Race about 60 nautical miles south of St. John's, Humphries said there was no doubt about the ship's safety or her ability.

The 97-metre Franklin rolled heavily — some reports said 43 degrees each way — and a female deck officer was injured during the gale.

Third mate Rosemary Delouchry, 26, was being treated in hospital here for an assortment of bruises and abrasions she received after being thrown across some equipment on the bridge while she was on watch during the gale.

Humphries and Gordon Warren, the coast guard's regional fleet system manager, said a ship which rolls naturally is less likely to get into trouble than one which initially resists rolling and then suddenly starts to go over.

Warren said the Franklin, like its sister ship Pierre Radison, is fitted with a flume tank.

The tank is partially filled with water ballast, fore and aft baffles in the tank prevent the water from moving too quickly from one side to the other during a roll. The general effect is that most water remains on the high side, thus increasing the ship's tendency to right herself.

Humphries said the Franklin has a "Swedish knife" on her bow. The knife actually is a solid steel outer stem which tends to split ice.

Older icebreakers like the Labrador and Louis St. Laurent have rounder bows and rely on a "pile-driver effect" to smash ice.

The bow, which cuts away sharply toward the ship's bottom below the waterline, is based on a design developed by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Humphries said.

The lower part of the stem knife ends in a rounded projection that stop the ship from riding fully up on to ice.

Although the Franklin's 13,600 horsepower is less than the Labrador's 15,000 and the Louis St. Laurent's 24,000, she is expected to be just as effective because of the new bow design.

Using six engines to turn two propellers, her top speed of 16.5 knots also is greater than that of the Louis St. Laurent and the Labrador.

Wrongful dismissal settled

A wrongful dismissal action launched two months ago by the former director of programs for the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped has been settled.

Board chairman Dr. George Stocker said today the settlement includes a back pay award for Timothy N. Taddy.

In addition, Taddy will be retained as a consultant by the board for a three month period to assist with the preparation of a long-term plan.

Inflation at 17.4% in U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's annual inflation rate rose again last month to 17.4 per cent — the highest figure for 2½ years, the government reported today.

The announcement that inflation had gone up another 0.2 per cent came amid warnings from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of more public expenditure cuts.

Social Credit: is it lights out time?

OTTAWA (CP) — The national spotlight that shone on Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy since the May 22 election may have been extinguished permanently Thursday night with the defeat of the minority Progressive Conservative government.

Despite his tiny power base, Roy had been able to command considerable attention on Parliament Hill since the May 22 election by keeping the nation in suspense every time a non-confidence motion threatened the government.

Would the rump party support the Conservatives and keep Parliament alive? Or would Roy and his colleagues vote with the opposition and pull the plug on Joe Clark's government?

The nuances of every statement uttered by the ardent Quebec nationalist who speaks little English made headlines as each vote approached. The Social Credit party had not wielded such a club since it propped up the minority government of John Diefenbaker in 1962.

The short, thin man with the raspy voice and tightly-pursed mouth appeared to take delight in playing the role of parliamentary mischief-maker and attempting to win government concessions for his support.

But when the Liberals and New Democratic Party voted against the government's first budget Thursday night, Roy was not even in the Commons, having decided his party would abstain.

"Even if I had voted for the government, they (the Conservatives) would have been defeated," Roy noted later.

Three absent Conservative MPs meant that the five Social Credit votes would not have saved the government. The government went down 139 to 133.

The February election thus becomes a major challenge for the 51-year-old Roy, who entered the federal scene this spring following a nine-year stint in the Quebec national assembly and a successful career in the prosperous Beauce region of Quebec as a credit union executive.

Each election since 1962, when there were 30 Social Credit MPs, has reduced the party's ranks.

No MPs from the party have been elected outside Quebec since 1965. Social Credit support has been isolated to a few rural Quebec ridings inhabited by conservative, fundamentalist Roman Catholic farmers.

The demise of the party is predicted with each election. This time, the Liberals and Conservatives will be fighting even harder to win the five seats now held by Roy and his MPs in an attempt to form a majority government.

Should either of the two major parties be successful in this goal, Roy no longer would be able to play a significant role in Parliament.

During the last election, the traditional Social Credit ridings were the scene of the most active campaigning by the Liberals and Conservatives in Quebec. That situation likely will be repeated.

What's in store for NDP?

OTTAWA (CP) — It could be boom, but then it could be bust, for the New Democratic Party in the wake of Thursday's defeat of the minority Progressive Conservative government.

If recent history repeats itself, the NDP's 27-member caucus may be doomed to shrink in the general election expected to be called today.

The NDP could be badly squeezed by voters seeking a majority government — Conservative or Liberal. It's happened before.

On the other hand, the third-largest party in the Commons has just been buoyed by enthusiastic support from rank-and-file members at its national policy convention and by fresh endorsements from the country's top labor organizations.

The NDP can take considerable credit for the government's defeat. It proposed the non-confidence motion on which the vote was held. Liberals supported New Democrats to defeat the government 139-133.

But a similar political scenario a few years ago spelled near-disaster for NDP Leader Ed Broadbent's predecessor David Lewis and the then 31-member NDP caucus.

Lewis had propped up a minority Liberal government elected in 1972. He withdrew that support and in the July 8, 1974, election lost his own seat and saw his party's strength in the Commons chopped to 16 seats. The NDP ended up with fewer than the 22 seats they had held before gaining the balance of power in 1972.

Broadbent went into the election last spring with those 16 seats. On May 22 his party had won 26 seats and later won another in a by-election.

He hasn't stopped campaigning since. And the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), which ran a trade union campaign to elect New Democrats, has been winding up, rather than down, on the political scene.

A Gallup poll taken in November said NDP popularity had risen to 23 per cent from 18 per cent of more than 1,000 adults interviewed.

Just hours before the government's defeat, CLC president Dennis McDermott said his labor organization would triple its effort for the NDP in an election campaign.

McDermott, brushed aside the Liberal and Conservative parties — "It's tweedledum and tweedledee . . . there's no essential philosophical ideological difference between them."

McDermott freely admits the CLC did not deliver miracles in the last election but it built an election machine that can be built upon, especially if the campaign fight is over anticipated bread and butter issues such as energy prices.

It was a bread and butter issue — wage and price controls — that Lewis blamed for polarizing voters in 1974.

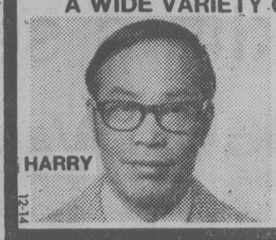

Conservatives had promised wage and price controls and Liberals vowed against them. Voters turned to the Liberals who later imposed controls anyway.

The NDP motion Thursday was in the name of Bob Rae, party finance critic and MP for Toronto-Broadview-Greenwood, who said the party was not expecting an election this soon but feels it is justified.

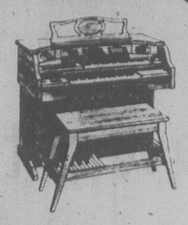

"My machinery's never really had a chance to stop," he added when asked if the NDP is ready to go.

TOWN TALK

Lauk got an invitation from Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy to attend Year of the Child closing ceremonies Dec. 14 at the legislature.

Wrote Lauk: "I regret that I will be unable to attend, not because I won't be available but rather because you and your government through your inaction and heartless public relations, have made the Year of the Child for B.C. a sham.

The rain was pouring down Thursday and the water was rising on the flat roof outside the legislative press gallery windows.

Leaves and other debris had plugged the drain holes. Gallery vice-president Ron Thompson telephoned Building Maintenance to get someone up to handle the emergency.

"How long before the water starts to run in through the windows?" asked the voice at the other end.

"Maybe half an hour," replied Thompson.

"That's good," said the voice. "That means I have time to finish my lunch."

From an economic standpoint, the hydrofoil proposed for the Seattle-Victoria run seems doomed without some government subsidy.

But Princess Marguerite aficionado Glenn Lee of Seattle cites another reason.

In a letter to Town Talk, he suggests "the hydrofoil thing will never fly with the passengers." The San Francisco cable car shutdown provides some interesting evidence, he says.

"Although diesel buses operate every few minutes along the cable car lines, patronage is about 50 per cent of cable car ridership and stores in the Fishermen's Wharf area report sales down 50 per cent.

Lee thinks a sizeable percentage of the Marguerite's passengers would similarly forsake a hydrofoil or other replacement vessel.

"They will go to other places which are more easily accessible, if to Canada at all."

Metchosin regional director Mac Tipton is spitting mad because newcomer Bill McElroy managed to ram through a 28-23 vote at this week's meeting of the Capital Regional District's board.

McElroy, a non-smoker, won his bid to have smoking banned at all regional board meetings after the 18 directors used their weighted votes (based on the population they represent) to decide the issue.

Tipton, a pipe-smoker, puffed furiously and muttered: "Who's going to supply the spitoons?"

Long-time board members, who know better, guffawed when McElroy said the smoking ban at meetings would only involve abstaining "possibly an hour a week."

Secretly fancy yourself as a member of Ice Capades? Twirling and swirling before breathless audiences as you tour North America?

The tryouts start around 10:30 p.m. and hopefuls should be at least 17 years old and own their own equipment, says public relations director Walter Quinn.

The show is looking for talented newcomers for its chorus line. Applicants should have a basic knowlege of spins and jumps and be able to stand up without falling down a whole lot.

Campaign promises have a habit of getting lost in the shuffle once the votes are in and aspiring politicians win their seats.

During his campaign he promised to be "a strong voice" when it came to helping people get acreage out of the Agricultural Land Reserve.

He attended his first committee meeting this week and two items on the agenda dealt with applications regarding ALR land, one to have the land removed for subdivision, the other to have the acreage carved up into five-acre hobby farm lots.

You guessed it. Rittaler said nary a word. Didn't even vote.

The Christmas Bureau, an organization set up to find gift and food donors for thousands of needy families, is having a problem this year getting enough contributions.

Christmas is fast approaching and the bureau still has a backlog of names of people needing assistance to brighten the holiday season.

This year the bureau collected 3,000 applications for help on behalf of 10,000 individuals. Many of those applications are still waiting to be filled.

Daddy of all water hazards has Gorge Vale's Leo Derman wondering whether to use a driver or a pontoon on 10th

Are you ready for showers?

Municipal crews and residents in Greater Victoria were mopping up today after two days of near-torrential downpour.

Several hundred basements were flooded as between 49 millimetres (1.8 inches) to 94 millimetres (3.7 inches) of rain was dumped on the area in a 24-hour period to 10 a.m. today.

In addition a mudslide on the Malahat near the summit forced motorists to detour through a lookout bypass for about an hour Thursday afternoon until highways crews cleared the road.

A section of the road to Port Renfrew was also washed out but Sooke RCMP said the road was open late Thursday night.

Damage is expected to run into the thousands of dollars.

The municipal clean up bill could reach as high as $20,000.

But there is some good news. The Victoria weathermen says the rain should abate later today, though continued showers and mild temperatures are forecast for the next five days.

Victoria engineer John Samson said the cost to the city will hit $7,000 as five crews worked throughout the night to unclog drains and help residents pump water from their basements.

Saanich's bill is expected to be about $8,000.

Estimates for Oak Bay and Esquimalt weren't available but both municipalities had crews out for much of the night.

To 2 a.m. today the city had received 150 calls, the vast majority involving flooded basements, mainly in Fairfield and the Haultain and Bay Street and Cook and Vancouver areas.

About 20 calls involved commercial buildings. Among the worst affected was the Executive House on Douglas where water in the basement peaked at the two-foot mark.

Saanich had more than 400 calls; Esquimalt's tally was 30 and Oak Bay's about 100.

"We just couldn't cope," said Samson. "Our storm drains and sewers are inadequate to handle that amount of water."

Saanich assistant engineer George Gunn said nearly a metre of water flowed into the basement of the old winery on Quadra causing extensive damage to some carpets and was the most serious report of damage so far received.

In Esquimalt a flood drain blocked up on Lyall between Joffre and Lampson. Part of the road was washed out and several homes in the area had their basements flooded. A large excavation site nearby filled with water forcing the municipality to station a workman at the site as a security precaution.

Victoria school board spokesman Bill Stavdal said there were roof leaks and flooding at more than 20 of the district's 53 schools but none closed.

The boiler rooms at Craigflower elementary and James Bay elementary schools were covered with between one to two feet of water.

Margaret Jenkins school in Fairfield had a serious roof leak when gutters backed up, but it was under control. At Gordon Head school the roof on a portable unit had to be wrapped in plastic because of leaks.

Winds and the rain knocked down trees and branches causing scattered power failures.

Most of the problems were in the Western Communities, North Saanich, Cadboro Bay and the Shawnigan Lake areas.

The weatherman said 49.7 mm. (1.96 inches) of rain fell at the airport over a 24-hour period ending at 10 a.m.; there were 83.8 mm. (3.3 inches) recorded at Gonzales and to 10 p.m. Thursday 94.5 mm. (3.72 inches) at Tillicum.

The record for a single day is 114.1 mm. (4.49 inches) set at the airport on Dec. 8, 1956.

So far this month 127.7 mm. of rain has fallen at the airport and 138.8 at Gonzales. The normal amounts are 134.1 and 107.2 respectively.

The system met a cold front from the north at about mid-point on the Island. In the northern sector, temperatures hovered at the freezing mark and mixed snow and rain was reported.

Washout halts Dayliner

Train passengers for up-island got only as far as Esquimalt this morning when the E&N dayliner was called back because of a washout on the line at Shawnigan Lake.

CP Rail said a bus was chartered to substitute for passenger service until repairs can be made at the 26.5 mile point.

A railway spokesman said dimensions of the washout were not known pending a report from the district roadmaster who was at the scene.

Heavy rains have caused exceptional runoff along the right of way, which at the washout runs down a grade some distance from the lake.

Huntington reneged says Trident

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The chief executive officer of Sidney-based Trident Aircraft Ltd. today accused the federal government of reneging on a deal to finance the company and denied reports it is almost bankrupt.

Small Business Minister Ron Huntington Thursday turned down the company's bid for Ottawa's guarantee of $4 million in financing, after leading B.C. politicians and Trident officials to believe for the last two months the federal government would come through with the money.

"I don't understand Ron Huntington. It seems to be the act of an irrational man," Trident chief executive officer Jerome Vaverek said today.

He said B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips is "incensed" at the turnaround.

B.C. had promised to put up the first $4 million in additional financing through the B.C. Development Corp. while shareholders pledged another $2 million.

Ottawa was asked to promise up to $4 million after this was spent — actually part of the money the previous government had promised back in April.

Vaverek also denied reports that Trident now has no choice but to go into bankruptcy. He said Ottawa actually stopped funding the company back in July, as the Tories reneged on a $6 million deal signed by the previous Liberal government, but Trident has struggled along.

"We have existed and struggled and progressed ever since last summer," he said.

He refuted a wire service report which quoted a BCDC official as saying Huntington's decision means the fledgling aircraft company, which barely has enough money to pay its 112 employees until Christmas, will likely go bankrupt.

"Bankruptcy is a media word. Nobody in management is even close to bankruptcy," said Vaverek.

"I don't know where the funds are coming from but I didn't know where the funds were coming from last summer when the government started getting flakey," he added.

HUNTINGTON

Huntington said he and federal industry, trade and commerce department officials decided the Trident project, which is attempting to manufacture an amphibious aircraft known as the Trigull, is not financially viable.

"I desperately wanted to deliver something vital to the West Coast economy," Huntington said Thursday.

"But it would have meant a total federal investment of $10 million and we felt the return wasn't good enough."

Trident, which already owes $11.5 million to BCDC, the federal government and the Royal Bank — whose loans have been guaranteed by the federal government — has been struggling to stay alive for 10 years.

It wanted to use the Trigull, which market surveys have shown would be a big seller in the light plane market, to build an aircraft industry in B.C.

They're primed to knock heads

By AL FORREST

Labor cheered, politicians cringed and business had mixed emotions as preparations began locally for the Feb. 18 federal election.

"I'm pleased the opposition parties had the courage to defeat this budget," Victoria Labor Council president John Shields said today.

"The policy of the Conservatives was taking money out of the pockets of the working man and was not heading to any real solutions. We faced more unemployment and inflation."

Cedric Steele, incoming president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said the government's defeat was "disappointing but probably inevitable — the budget was not acceptable to the majority of the people."

Steele said the Tories also were insensitive to the needs of British Columbians. They had talked (on page 17 of the budget) about a surplus of accommodation, which is true of Ontario and Eastern Canada, but apparently they were unaware of the housing crisis in the west.

Failure to extend capital cost allowances to spur apartment construction was a severe blow, he said.

At the same time, it was unfortunate the government had been defeated so early without having had time to try out its belt-tightening measures.

Local politicians, meanwhile, were preparing for nominating conventions early in the new year.

Conservative MPs Allan McKinnon (Victoria) and Don Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich) were in a strategy session in Ottawa this morning and were expecting to be home soon. Both will seek re-election.

Munro won the May 22 election with 29,731 votes. Bob Cameron of the NDP came second with 15,752, Liberal Alan Peterson was third with 8,037 and independent Philip Ney trailed with 871.

Cameron, a teacher at Mount Douglas high school and a newly-re-elected alderman of Saanich, said he is giving serious thought to running federally again but he will have to clear it with both employers, the school board and the council.

"I would need leave of absence."

Cameron said Prime Minister Clark had made "a terrible blunder" with his oil policy which produced higher taxes without helping to bring Canada any closer to self-sufficiency.

Meanwhile, Peterson said he is giving serious consideration to seeking the nomination again for the Liberals. He said he would prefer to campaign under a new leader as Trudeau did not have a good image in the west.

But under Trudeau or any leader the Liberals figured to do better in February than they did last May.

In Victoria riding, the May 22 result had been McKinnon 27,988, Gretchen Brewin of the NDP 15,344, Liberal Robert Monaghan 7,761 and D. Ratzlaff, Marxist-Leninist 89.

Mrs. Brewin, newly-elected Victoria alderman, said she would prefer not to run in February because she felt she should devote all her attention to council.

While she hadn't totally ruled out the possibility of being a candidate, her immediate reaction was that she should help the party find some other candidate, she said.

Monaghan said he was not eager to run again for the Liberals in Victoria but would not rule it out if the party called upon him.

Monaghan said he hoped Trudeau would stay on as leader for the campaign.

New returning officers will have to be appointed for both ridings. The chief returning officers are appointed by the party in power and they were Liberal appointees in the May 22 vote.

Major LSD haul

Victoria police have laid charges against a 20-year-old city youth following one of the largest seizures of the hallucinegenic drug LSD in recent years in this area.

A police spokesman said today 3,000 hits of the drug worth an estimated $18,000 on the street and a small amount of marijuana were seized by officers in a search last weekend at a house in Sooke.

Officers found the youth in possession of what they believed be a small amount of marijuana and LSD.

The spokesman said the youth gave an address on the West Coast Road but later learned he was living in a house in Sooke.

A search warrant was obtained and officers raided the house that same night.

The youth, whose name has not been released has been charged with possession of marijuana and possession of a restricted drug for the purposes of trafficking.

Villeneuve Canada's top athlete

GILLES VILLENEUVE
... Grand prix driver

By The Canadian Press

If Gilles Villeneuve had his choice, he'd probably drive high-powered Formula One race cars for the rest of his life.

"Sure and maybe win a few more awards, eh?" he said Thursday in a telephone interview from his apartment in Monaco after learning he had been voted Canada's male athlete of the year.

In 1979, the plucky little French-Canadian rode a crest unprecedented in Canadian motor racing history, winning three Grand Prix events and finishing second to Ferrari team-mate Jody Scheckter in the world driving championship.

And there's more, much more, Villeneuve said.

"I guess I'll drive another six, seven, eight or maybe 10 years," he said of his future plans.

In the annual year-end poll conducted by The Canadian Press, sports writers and sportscasters picked Villeneuve as a clear winner of the Lionel Conacher Award presented annually to Canada's top male athlete.

Downhill skier Ken Read of Calgary was a distant second with Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders, the National Hockey League's top scorer

Villeneuve, normally calm, poised and professional under pressure, admitted he was excited about the media voting.

"I'm very surprised," he said, "and very happy, of course."

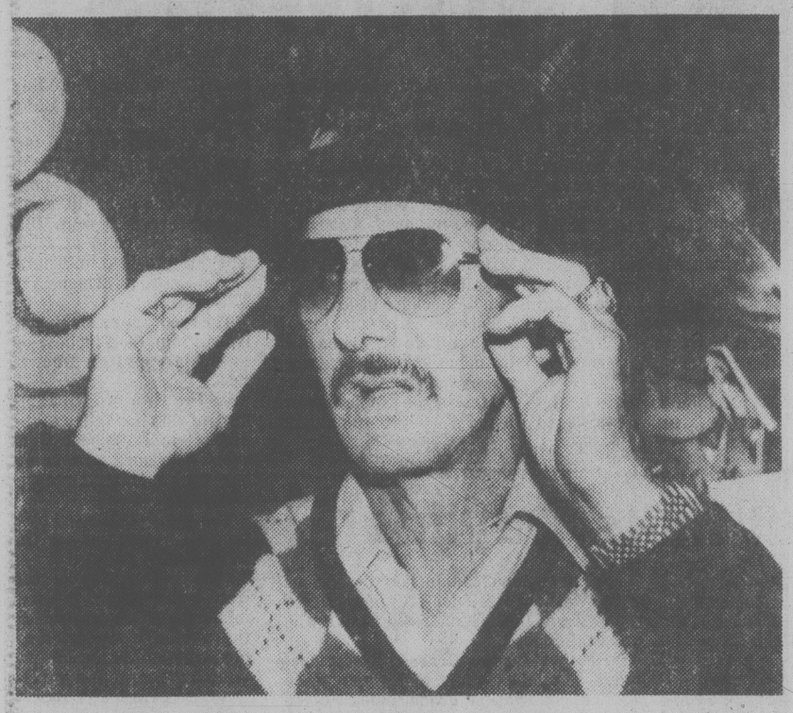

Villeneuve, 27, finished third in the voting in 1978 — on the strength of his victory in the 1978 Canadian Grand Prix at Montreal — behind swimmer Graham Smith of Edmonton, winner of six gold medals at the Commonwealth Games, and Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Points were tabulated on the basis of 3-2-1 for first, second and third places on the ballot and Villeneuve earned 270 points. He was named first on 62 of the 128 ballots. He also picked up 34 votes for second and 16 for third.

Read received 17 firsts, 37 seconds and 26 thirds for 151 points while Trottier received 16-9-19 and 85 points.

Warned by MacPhail, Martin to hold tongue

NEW YORK (AP) — American League president Lee MacPhail has warned Billy Martin that continued inflammatory remarks about New York Yankees and owner George Steinbrenner could endanger the controversial former manager's return to baseball.

"I'm not trying to gag him," MacPhail said, after meeting for about 20 minutes with Martin on Thursday. "He has the right to speak, but he could do damage to himself if he keeps it up."

MacPhail said he felt something had to be done to bring the public feud to an end.

"I agree 100 per cent," Martin said. "It will stop right here . . . I will continue my speaking engagements but I won't discuss George or say anything about George."

MacPhail summoned Martin to the meeting following remarks the former manager made at an appearance at the University of Rhode Island Tuesday night.

"I'm not concerned about the meeting," said Martin. "I have nothing to hide. I just gave honest answers to honest questions."

Included among the answers Martin gave to the URI audience was the opinion that Steinbrenner "is sick." But Billy insisted Thursday before seeing MacPhail that he still likes the Yankees boss.

"If you think I don't like the man (Steinbrenner), you're wrong," Martin said. "He's done so many wonderful things. But he doesn't know a friend from an enemy. I feel sorry for him."

Yet Martin doesn't hide his animosity, either.

"He (Steinbrenner) said I violated being a Yankee," the ex-manager said. "How does he know? He never played for them."

Martin said he has received a paycheque every two weeks from the club and expects to continue receiving them. He had two more years on his contract when Steinbrenner fired him following the Bloomington, Minn., fight with marshmallow salesman Joseph Cooper.

But there have been suggestions that the contract may have been voided by the fight. Paragraph 3A of every contract requires that the manager "conform to high standards of personal conduct, fair play and good sportsmanship."

Outsiders buy Quakes

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — San Jose Earthquakes of the North American Soccer League have been sold to a group of out-of-state investors headed by advertising executive Joel Chasen.

"The club will remain in San Jose and will be under the control of local people," Chasen said after Tony Kovac, team owner since the start of the 1978 season, sold the Quakes.

Terms of the sale, which still needs league approval, were not made public.

Great Falls on way out

Times News Services

The high-riding Victoria Cougars slipped, somewhat unexpectedly, but that was the least of the Western Hockey League's problems Thursday.

League executives have been scrambling for solutions but despite their efforts the fall of Great Falls Americans seems to be a certainty.

Reports from various league corners say Americans will be disbanded and its players distributed among other WHL teams in a telephone draft Monday.

"If the team stayed in Great Falls for the season, the owners would lose something like $250,000," Jackson said. "I don't know how often they can go to the well before it can run dry."

League sources say New Westminster Bruins will get the first two draft choices from the Great Falls roster. Other teams will select remaining players according to a points system.

Each team in the league will still play 72 games but the schedule will be revised.

The Montana team, which has managed only two wins and a tie in its last 27 games, played in Edmonton as the Oil Kings during the last season. It was a successful club in Flin Flon the year before.

Jackson said he has been talking with Brandon Wheat Kings about a possible assistant coaching job.

The Western Division-leading Cougars, meanwhile, were upstaged Thursday by a team heading in an opposite direction.

Medicine Hat Tigers, losers of their last six games, got leadership from a new acquisition and put an end to Victoria's nine-game winning streak.

Brian Zeigler, recently acquired from Billings Bighorns, scored twice to spark the Tigers to a 5-1 victory. Jumping into a 3-0 lead in the opening period, the Tigers kept Cougars off balance most of their way with tenacious checking and spirited skating.

Tigers also took advantage of a shaky defensive performance by the Cougars, who played without defenceman Mark Robinson, sidelined with a minor shoulder problem. Robinson, who injured the shoulder in Lethbridge the previous night, is expected to be back in harness when the Cougars continue a 10-game road trip in Saskatoon tonight.

In the only other game played Thursday, Portland Winter Hawks came up with their smartest offensive display of the season to trounce Seattle Breakers 12-3.

Flyers wake up late to preserve streak

Times News Services

After more than 45 minutes of play, Quebec Nordiques had within their grasp something that few other National Hockey League teams have even glimpsed — a win over Philadelphia Flyers.

Then the Nordiques made a mistake. They scored a power play goal to take a 3-1 lead and woke up their hosts who came roaring back for a 6-4 triumph Thursday night.

"When Quebec scored their power-play goal, that seemed to pick up everyone on our bench," said Flyers coach Pat Quinn. "We were sagging, but the bench came alive at that point."

The victory kept the Flyers unbeaten streak alive at 25, including 18 wins. They need three more games without a loss to equal the unbeaten streak of 28 set by Montreal Canadiens in the 1977-78 season.

Quebec goalie Marcel Dion, who faced 40 shots, contended the Nordiques beat themselves by using the wrong tactics.

"When we were up 3-1, all we did was dump the puck down the ice," said Dion. "That's not how you play hockey. That's not how we played for the first 51 minutes."

The Flyers' only loss this year came to Atlanta Flames in the second game of the season.

And out of league headquarters comes word that Philadelphia Flyers have been fined a total of $3,000 and defenceman Randy Holt of Los Angeles Kings has received a two-game suspension as a result of a bench-clearing incident Dec. 6.

The fine, including an automatic $1,000 assessment against the Flyers, was levied because their players were the first off the bench in the game at Philadelphia.

Russ Hunt first to reach 1,000

Hunt's sizzling effort earned him men's fivepin laurels during the 10th week of the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Lorraine Pigott captured women's fivepin honors.

Russ, a 27-year-old shoe store manager, topped the men's division with a 393-337-271 — 1,001 series in the Wednesday Majors League at Town and Country Lanes.

"It was quite a surprise for me," Russ said later, "I haven't been going too well this year."

After a slow start in the final game, Russ settled down with strikes in the seventh, eighth and ninth frames, struck in the 10th and managed to pick up 25 in the last frame.

Lorraine got better at the end and topped her division with a 257-242-327 — 826 series in the Friday Matinee League at Town and Country.

By capturing weekly awards, both Russ and Lorraine are now qualified to compete in the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs next May.

Should have treated them like dirt

Times News Services

Claude Ruel assumed his duties as coach of Montreal Canadiens at practice Thursday, while the man he replaced sat at home, wondering where the promise of August had gone wrong.

"Where the mistake was made . . . where I made my mistake is that I'm a human being," said Bernie Geoffrion, who quit as coach of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup champions Wednesday in an emotional eight-hour meeting with managing director Irving Grundman.

Geoffrion said it wasn't the first time he had gone to Grundman ready to quit.

"I wasn't tough enough," said Geoffrion. "At the beginning, everything was perfect. We had the system. Claude had the same system going with me that Scotty (Bowman) had. We didn't have to say anything. It was the same thing in games, same thing in practices.

"Then all of a sudden, after the defeat here by Philadelphia, it started to go down," said Geoffrion, referring to a 5-3 loss Nov. 3 to the Flyers.

"We went to the Coast, and it started to pick up again. Then down. I tried every way. I tried to be a tough guy but, you see, they knew me. At the beginning, I had been soft, and to jump from one to the other ... they didn't believe it.

"Three weeks ago, I figured I lost my touch. Those guys were probably being treated like dirt by Scotty — and please understand Scotty is a friend of mine. Hell, he called me last summer and said: 'Boom, if you want a job, you've got a job with me, but if you're thinking about Montreal, think twice.'

"Maybe they loved being treated like dirt, but I couldn't do it. I can't because they're professionals.

"That's where I made my mistake."

Geoffrion will take a vacation and consider his future, while Ruel tries to put the Canadiens, 15-9-6, back on top of the over-all standings starting tonight at Edmonton against the Oilers.

General manager Punch Imlach hopes to snap Toronto Maple Leafs out of lethargic play by inviting Carl Brewer to step out of the lineup of the NHL Oldtimers into a tryout.

Apart from defence, Imlach also is having problems with goaltender Mike Palmateer. Leafs have refused the high salary demands of Palmateer and the feisty goaltender is looking at greener pastures.

"I should be able to get $200,000 from a team in the States," Palmateer, 25, who's been with the Leafs starting goaltender the last three seasons, said Thursday. "With the exchange rate and the tax breaks I could get down there, it would come to about $250,000 in Canadian money."

Palmateer is finishing a Toronto contract worth $70,000 a year — about $130,000 short of what he says he wants to stay with the Leafs.

Paul Harrison, Leafs' backup goaltender, replaced Palmateer for Wednesday's game against Colorado after Leafs were shelled 6-1 by New York Islanders last Saturday and Harrison is getting the starting nod again Saturday when Atlanta Flames skate into Maple Leaf Gardens.

DataTech squad wins sixth straight

DataTech is still climbing.

After getting off to a rocky start with four straight losses, DataTech picked up its sixth successive victory by tripping Cuckoo Clock 94-83 in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League play Thursday.

Mike Gains (33) and Dave Mulcahy (24) topped Cuckoo Clock.

Quinn Groenhyde fired 34 points to lead Henderson's, which only fielded five players.

Ski train attraction boosted by oil prices

Oil pricing plans for the next few years are an added incentive for running a ski train on the E&N Railway.

Higher gasoline prices (although they're not all that high when related to wage increases over the past decade) will boost the cost of a day or weekend ski trip to any of the four Vancouver Island areas considerably.

Properly scheduled train service from Victoria to Courtenay would be an instant hit with the skiing public on the south end of Vancouver Island, easing the hassle and expense of commuting three to four hours each way.

Similar ski trains in the eastern part of Canada proved to be instant money-makers and service has had to be expanded since they were first introduced.

So, Via Rail. How about a test run?

I'm sure there's enough skiers in the Greater Seattle area who might want to make the trip here and avoid the lineups and overcrowding on the Cascade slopes.

And, speaking about skiing, it looks as if only a few of the Island areas will be opening this weekend.

It was raining this morning at some areas and a lot of the snow that accumulated over the last couple of weeks has been washed off.

A cross-country ski clinic (5½ hours of lectures, demonstrations and practical sessions) will start at 10 a.m. Saturday at Mt. Washington, near Courtenay.

The fee is $10 per adult or $15 for a family unit of two adults. There will be no charge for children aged 16 and under accompanied by an adult.

The clinic, conducted by members of the Canadian Association of Nordic Ski Instructors, will cover equipment and clothing selection, waxing techniques and the basic physical introduction to the sport.

In a slight change of format, there will be a turkey draw out of all the weigh-in slips at 2:15 p.m. at Anglers' Anchorage Marina. Hidden-weight prizes will also be given out.

★ ★ ★

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will hold its monthly meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the Strawberry Vale Hall, 11 High Street.

Basically a family get-together, the meeting will feature a slide show of club activities and the hunting and fishing trips taken by various members during 1979.

Salmon fishing has been good on Constance Bank, in the mouth of Esquimalt Harbor, between William Head and Albert Head, from Race Passage to Church Rock, off the Bedfords and Beechey Head as well as near Secretary Island and the Sooke Bluffs.

Deep lines and bait have produced the best success with catches of winter chinooks tipping the scales to 12 pounds near Victoria and up to 24 pounds towards Sooke.

McNab to coach Caps as Waiters moves up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The tactics deployed by Vancouver Whitecaps next season in defence of their Soccer Bowl championship will be those of Bob McNab, promoted Thursday to head coach by the North American Soccer League team.

McNab, 35, spent one year with the Whitecaps as an assistant under manager-coach Tony Waiters, who now will direct most of his efforts to managerial duties.

Club president John Best made the announcement at a news conference, confirming one-year agreements for Waiters, McNab and himself.

"This will be a comfortable relationship between myself and Tony," said McNab. "Our beliefs are similar and I'm looking forward to plotting our defence of the league championship."

McNab is a former English international who was a star defender with Arsenal when that club won the prestigious double in 1970-71.

"We won last year because the parts were right for a good team," McNab said. "Individuals must fit into the framework of the team.

"Tony and I will be recruiting the type of player who can fit into a team-orientated situation. We don't want the star system of the (New York) Cosmos because that doesn't necessarily lead to team play. We're looking forward to having a good blend of personnel to be better than our 20-10 record of last year."

Waiters, in a telephone interview from Modbury, England, said the Whitecaps must progress in their overall program if Vancouver is to continue to be one of the leading teams in the NASL.

Waiters will be upgrading the scouting system in Europe and the rest of the world.

Waiters was head coach for nearly three full seasons, with Vancouver winning divisional titles the last two years. The Whitecaps captured the Soccer Bowl in September by defeating Tampa Bay Rowdies.

Claremont pulls major hoop upset

Claremont, classed as a "A" school with fewer than 200 girls enrolled, tripped "AA" Victoria Tigers 55-42 Thursday in a Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League game.

In other games, Belmont Tomahawks downed Reynolds 50-28, Stelly's defeated Lambrick Park 42-21 and Parkland nipped Dunsmuir, 41-37.

Mona McIvor led Claremont with 15 points, one more than the total contributed by clubmate Jenny Webster.

Kelly Hunter sank 12 points to lead Parkland, which held a 22-11 advantage at half time, and Marie Johnston fired 18 for Dunsmuir.

Visitors from Germany to winter in Island waters

If in your travels this winter you come across the 28-foot sloop Moriz B, it will be well worth your while to talk to her owners, Harald Voss and his wife Hedel.

Harald and his wife hail from the city of Hamburg and have been travelling the world in Moriz B for the past four years.

Moriz B is, as Harald puts it, "a very simple boat, nothing special." She has no Loran or radio, in fact her only electronics is an echo-sounder.

Harald and his wife intend to spend the winter in these waters and anyone planning to take off for foreign parts in the future could learn a great deal from them.

Their longest stint at sea was 43 days and Harald explains they try to be as self-sufficient as possible when it comes to the galley. Wild berries supplement their diet when they're available and home-made bread has become a way of life.

After leaving New Zealand and Australia, the couple spent some time in Alaska before heading for Victoria.

They intend to head back to Alaska next summer to visit such places as Ketchikan, Sitka and Glacier Bay. "There's so much to see and we've come such a long way. It would be a shame not to go back," Harald says.

The Moriz B will return to her home port in Germany in September of 1981.

Dennis Parsons, long-time worker for the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, is back in harness again. At the recent annual meeting Dennis was "persuaded" to take on the job of fleet captain, one of the most challenging assignments on the executive roster.

One of his first tasks is to finalize details of the squadron's annual invitational New Year's Day whaler race, which will be sailed in service yawl-rigged whalers with minimum crews of five, including the skipper.

Crews competing in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's two around-the-buoys races on Sunday faced winds that blew up to 35 knots the second time around.

Jack Foster's Sherlock led the fleet of larger Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats, winning both sailouts. In the first race she was followed by Fleetwood, owned by Doug Hemphill and Dave Richardson. In third spot was Ross Mathewson's Kotuku.

Hocus won the first race for Thunderbirds, edging out John Dewey's Shuttlecock and Larry Shorter's Kila Kila. Kila Kila was first over the finish line in the second race, the runners-up being John Edwards' Drambuie and Shuttlecock.

Graham Morgan's Sea Pointer won the first race for Catalina 27s. After her came Ron Jewula's Beowulf and Gerry Porter's Lickety Split. The second time around it was Dan Syroid's Opo, followed by Sea Pointer and Wayne Wainwright's Alana.

In competition for smaller PHRF boats the first race went to Mel Macara's Pittance. Runners-up were Bob Callow's Minstrel and Bruce Klaver's Wings. Minstrel won the second race, being followed by Ron Saunders' Irrawaddy and Wings.

The club's Cal 20 fleet had a race in the afternoon. It was won by Ed Life's Semiramis.

Fleetwood was top boat in the series for larger PHRF boats, runners-up being Sherlock and Danish Pastry. Pittance was first in the smaller PHRF section, being followed by Minstrel and Wings.

The top three Thunderbirds were Hocus, Shuttlecock and Kila Kila while leading the Catalina 27 fleet were Lickety Split, Beowulf and Opo.

The Christmas spirit came early for at least two of the boating groups that contribute to safety afloat in this area. It was a privilege to attend the Victoria Canoe Club's annual party and see the many items they brought to help fill the hampers which will be distributed by St. Martin's in the Field Church. Through its regular basic courses the club turns out some pretty skilled paddlers.

It was also great to attend the Christmas dinner of the Victoria Power Squadron which, through its winter night courses over the years, has produced thousands of graduates capable of handling a boat in all the conditions that life afloat can bring.

Appropriately enough, the squadron's Christmas gift was a $200 donation to the B.C. Maritime Museum.

Pro boxing suspended until safety rules set

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be no professional boxing in New York State until an investigation into a ring death is completed and until new safety measures can be implemented.

The suspension of fights was announced Thursday night by Jack Prenderville, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission.

The commission's action came several hours after a call for the supension of boxing activity was made by Senator Roy Goodmane, chairman of the state senate committee investigating the death last month of Willie Classen.

Goodman said that there should be no more fights until the implementation of a six-point plan of boxer safety recommended by his committee.

"I don't believe any one person can be blamed," Goodman said of Classen's fatal injury in the final round of a bout against Wilford Scypion on Nov. 23 at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

Many people testified before the senate committee that the fight should have been stopped after the ninth round. An autopsy showed Classen died of a brain injury.

"I make no finding of criminality in the matter," said Goodman, a Republican from New York City. "But I do make a finding of an archaic system."

Prenderville said in a statement that the athletic commission welcomed the senate committee investigation and that "we have carefully followed its hearing while at the same time conducting our own review of the commission's rules, regulations, procedures and medical facilities."

One of the big measures to be implemented is the neurological training of ringside physicians, referees and advisory officials.

"Several days ago, on Dec. 11, we wrote to Dr. Bennett Derby and asked him to discuss with our medical advisory board the implementation of a neurological training clinic for our medical panel and officials."

Two of the other recommendations by the senate committee called for ambulances and other emergency equipment and plans to be at every fight, and for the suspension time for any boxer knocked out to be expanded to 90 days from 30.

'Aerial tanks' arm Soviets

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has developed "aerial tanks" — giant helicopters with laser guided missiles and heavy firepower that surpass anything in NATO's armory, Jane's All The World's Aircraft said Thursday.

The publication, in its new edition, also suggested the United States and its allies would do better to monitor the Soviet military machine in Europe with an around-the-clock screen of robot spy planes rather than invest huge sums on cruise missiles possibly vulnerable to Soviet techniques.

Jane's editor John W.R. Taylor, in a foreword to the 1979-1980 edition, said the spy robots would be able to detect military movements on the other side of the Iron Curtain and mark targets such as tanks with radar or laser beams for attack by flying robots in the event of eastern aggression.

Jane's said the Soviet Union has used "enthusiasm and imagination" in integrating helicopters into its armed forces.

It said there is evidence nearly 6,000 MI-8 helicopters have been built "mostly as military aircraft capable of carrying up to 28 troops or the heaviest firepower yet seen on any helicopter in the world."

It said the MI-24 helicopter "is an impressive assault transport and gunship, heavily armed and armored, with laser guided missiles now added to its weapons."

Pointing out that NATO has nothing comparable, Jane's said it "is best regarded as a very high speed armored fighting vehicle, almost an aerial tank."

Jane's also said there have been persistent reports the Soviets are building a new MIG fighter in the class of America's Northrop F-181, which is said to have been at an advanced flight testing stage last spring.

"The time is clearly overdue for NATO nations to make better use of their technological skills to re-equip their armed forces rather than risk becoming the richest occupants of a future nuclear graveyard," he said.

Deadly spiders invade

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Hordes of poisonous spiders whose bite can be fatal have invaded Johannesburg, health officials said today.

Residents have been warned to report any sightings of the Violin spider to the Department of Health.

The tiny brown-and-orange spotted spider inflicts a painless bite that can kill children and incapacitate adults for months.

"The spider appears to be spreading rapidly after an accidental introduction to the mines around the city," a health official said. "It appears to have been carried from the mines now to homes throughout the city. The situation is serious."

'Bomb' was a dud

DENVER (AP) — A lone electrician who only wanted to use a phone sent Regional Transportation officials scurrying away from a meeting, thinking he was there to plant a bomb.

An anonymous call Wednesday warned a bomb would go off at 10:30 a.m. A search revealed no bomb.

But exactly at 10:30 a.m., an electrician who was working in the building's parking lot, sauntered into the switchboard-reception room carrying a black box with wires dangling from it.

Directors and operators dashed out of a back door, leaving only Executive Director Howard Beck behind to confront the "bomber."

The electrician, who declined to give his name, explained that he just wanted to make a telephone call.

Bridge collapses

FORKS, Wash. (UPI) — Four vehicles plunged into the water early today and one person was killed when the Bogachiel River Bridge on State Route 101 collapsed 4.5 miles south of Forks.

Three other persons were rescued. A mobile crane was being used to lift the vehicles from the river.

No further details were immediately available.

IRA bomb blitz poised

LONDON (CP) — Scotland Yard has warned that a Christmas bomb blitz by Irish Republican Army terrorists still is possible — despite this week's police raids which have led to the detention of 24 persons under Britain's Prevention of Terrorism Act.

"Christmas has always been a prime target, a prime time for bombings, perhaps because they (the IRA) see it as an effective time to draw attention to their cause," a Scotland Yard spokesman said Thursday.

He added that police "certainly cannot say the arrests and ammunition seizures eliminae the threat of bombs at any time."

The Yard has issued a warning urging the public to look out for anything suspicious "and if you find a suspect parcel isolate it and call the police."

The spokesman said the public also should be on the look-out for "sleepers."

"This means an Irish couple who may have moved into the neighborhood within the last two years. They might seem unusually quiet. We call them sleepers since they're either IRA plants or merely lying low before becoming involved in future IRA activity, to avoid suspicion."

The suspects arrested Wednesday after dawn raids in London, Liverpool Birmingham, Manchester and Southampton can be held for up to seven days. Then, if charges have not been laid, police can apply for them to be departed from the country under a special order.

Last Christmas despite the biggest anti-terrorist campaign ever mounted by the yard, Britain was struck by co-ordinated assaults on five provincial cities in one night and the explosion of three car bombs in London 24 hours later.

Although there have been 18 injuries so far this year in Britain, Airey Neave, former Tory shadow northern Ireland minister, was the only person to die at the hands of the IRA.

A Pocket Full of Miracles

PENTAX Auto 110 SLR Pocket System

● AUTO 110 In One Pocket, Accessories in Another
It's hardly enough to say that the AUTO 110 is a pocketable camera. It's a pocketable photographical system. Roughly as high and wide as a pack of cigarettes, it's so easy to carry about that you'll want to keep it with you at all times. And, it slips easily into shirt pockets, jacket pockets or handbags, even with the standard lens attached. What's more, the accessories are pocketable as well. That's not to say that you can put the whole system into one pocket. But, you can fit both accessory wide-angle and telephoto lenses together with filters, close-up lenses, etc., inside a small case and slip them into another pocket. And for times when you really want to go all out, the entire system — winder and flash unit along with interchangeable lenses, filters, lens hoods, etc. — can be carried over your shoulder in a case no larger than what you would use to carry regular 35mm camera!

● Easy Cartridge Loading, Automatic Film Speed Setting
There's no film loading hassle with the AUTO 110. Just open the back cover, pop in a 110 film cartridge and reclose the cover. The film speed is set automatically for all available ASA film speeds, permitting use of both popular ASA 100 film and high-speed ASA 400. It also accepts slower slide films. You can easily tell what exposure you are on by the number visible in the large, back cover window.

Five-year-old Penny dies — of extreme old age

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Tiny, wrinkled Penny Vantine, who like other 5-year-olds enjoyed graham crackers and "Winnie the Pooh" stories, was cursed with the body of a 90-year-old woman.

Doctors at Childrens Hospital where the little girl spent the last part of her life dying of old age, died peacefully in her sleep Thursday morning. She weighed a mere 9 pounds, was only 29 inches tall. The official cause of death was chickenpox, a disease frequently fatal to the elderly.

"She caught chickenpox last weekend," said hospital spokesman Larry Anderson. "She was in no pain or distress and had gotten over the visible, physical effects. Her body just didn't have the necessary resistance."

Doctors said Penny had the size and mobility of an 8-month-old child. Yet she suffered a litany of old-age afflictions — arthritis, cataracts, glaucoma, poor hearing, high blood pressure, poor circulation, decaying teeth, receding gums, weakened neck muscles, and dry and brittle hair.

The shrunken child had wrinkles, thin hair, sunken eyes, and tightly drawn skin due to the disappearance of the subcutaneous fatty layer.

Penny's rare genetic disorder — Cockayne's Syndrome — has been diagnosed only 50 times in medical history since its discovery 43 years ago. Doctors said it caused her to age 15 to 20 years for every year she lived.

Doctors say that apparently the cells of victims cannot replace or repair themselves like normal cells, causing rapid degeneration or aging.

"I'm mad" were the words Penny said most frequently, although she had a vocabulary of about 15 words when she entered the hospital from a nursing home.

The hospital staff said, however, she was fairly happy and often smiled and raised her arms to be embraced whenever anyone she liked came into view. She tried to hold objects and feed herself despite severe arthritis.

But like a cranky old lady, Penny told nurses to "Go away" when she was tired.

Funeral arrangements were pending the arrival of Penny's mother, Jeannie Mitchell, who was flying from Olympia, Wash., with her Navy husband, who is Penny's stepfather, and the couple's two normal children.

We're being sucked in!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists believe the earth's galaxy, the Milky Way, is hurtling through space at a million miles an hour, pulled by the gravity of a huge cluster of galaxies.

"Our strong conclusion is that our galaxy and the local galaxies around us are all moving off (toward) the constellation Virgo and that we are moving on the order of 500 kilometers per second (1.08 million m.p.h.)," George Smoot said Wednesday.

"That's disturbing because it's very hard to explain why we are moving so fast . . . but I would bet there's something out there pulling us toward it," he said. "The most logical thing is a supercluster of galaxies off in that direction."

And, if one supercluster exists, there are probably others — great clumps of matter in an otherwise smooth and regular universe, he said.

Smoot, of the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, described the preliminary results of his study in a telephone interview. He said the supercluster have not been sighted, but inferred from evidence gathered in the study.

Using data obtained from instruments aboard high-flying U-2 aircraft operated by the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, scientists measured background radiation, and deduced the velocity of cosmic bodies from it.

Simply described, the universe can be regarded as a balloon that is steadily expanding in all directions, as the billions of galaxies move away from each other at equal speeds.

But Smoot said his group found, contrary to that theory, that the speeds differed in the direction of Virgo.

$3.5M for radiation damage

DETROIT (AP) — A Wayne County jury has awarded $3.5 million to a woman who says she lost most of her right leg and intestines in radiation damage during treatment for cancer.

Mrs. Burchenal's lawyer, David John Cooper, said she was bombarded with exceptionally high radiation doses through a four-million-volt linear accelerator the clinic had received just three weeks before the treatment began.

Autos stuck in rut

DETROIT (UPI) — The U.S. auto industry failed in early December to climb out of its deep slump, but one executive said the gloomy sales picture is distorted by comparison with unusually healthy sales last year at this time.

Combined sales reported Thursday by the five domestic automakers in the Dec. 1-10 period declined 23.5 percent from the same period last year, led by a steep drop by Ford Motor Co.

With sales continuing to lag, Ford, General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. scheduled massive production cutbacks next week, saying they would close 16 domestic assembly plants and place 66,575 workers on temporary layoff.

That figure is in addition to more than 116,000 autoworkers now on indefinite layoff.

The domestic industry sold 168,979 cars in early December, down 23.5 percent from 220,836 in the same period last year. The early December period of 1978 was close to an all-time industry record, and — thanks to special incentives — had been an all-time early December record for Ford.

Japan, Philippines shaken by quakes

TOKYO (UPI) — Two moderate earthquakes shook Japan and the Philippines today, and seismological experts said they were not connected.

One quake jolted Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido, halting local trains temporarily, the Japanese Meteorological Agency reported.

The agency said the tremor occurred at 4:19 p.m. (11:19 p.m. PST) and registered 4.0 on the Japanese scale of 7.0 at Kushiro in eastern Hokkaido, 562 miles north of Tokyo.

In the Phillipines to the south of the Japanese chain of islands, a tremor struck at 4:49 p.m. local time, geophysicists reported. The quake was centered on Mindor Island, 150 miles south of Manila. The quake was also felt in Manila.

Geophysicists said it measure 4.0 on the Rossi-Forel scale of 9.0 on Mindor and 3.0 in Manila.

Scientists in the Philippines said the two tremors were not related, originating in separate earthquake zones. Japanese experts agreed, saying it would not take 30 minutes for a quake wave to travel from the Philippines to Japan.

U.S. urged to lift sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain is putting strong pressure on the United States to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia as soon as possible, state department officials say.

But the Carter administration is still wrestling with doubts about whether the United Nations, which imposed the sanctions, ought to be the agency to remove them, the officials said Thursday.

British Ambassador Sir Nicholas Henderson stated the British position for reporters Thursday at a breakfast sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine.

He said that since Rhodesia has accepted a British governor, it has reverted to the legal status of a colony. Therefore, he said, sanctions against Rhodesia are sanctions against Britain itself, and should be removed.

U.S. state department officials say the British have been much more forceful in their private discussions of the subject, saying they would like the sanctions removed before Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher arrives in the United States for a state visit Sunday.

The sanctions were imposed by the UN Security Council in 1968. Although they have proven difficult to enforce tightly, they have restricted Rhodesia's trade with the world through a combination of currency restrictions and embargoes.

Several members of the administration, including UN Ambassador Donald McHenry, have argued that the British ought to ask the Security Council to take "appropriate action" to lift the sanctions.

McHenry argued in an internal departmental memo that the United States might be left out on a limb if it lifts the sanctions without UN approval and the Rhodesian peace process subsequently collapses.

Other officials have said that since Britain was the party that complained to the United Nations and asked for the sanctions, Britain is entitled to decide when to end them.

Canada is prepared to drop the sanctions, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said in Brussels, and is prepared to send civilian experts to help supervise new elections in Rhodesia.

Miss MacDonald made the comments after joining other NATO foreign ministers in praising British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington for his role in the Rhodesia talks.

Meanwhile, in London, organizers of the Rhodesia peace conference said it will hold its final session Saturday and will sign a final agreement soon afterward ending the 7-year-old bush war and giving the African country full independence.

Colombia's quake toll 400, and rising

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Authorities today reported 200 residents of an island off Colombia's Pacific coast were killed in Wednesday's earthquake, bringing to nearly 400 the death toll in the nation's worst quake in more than a century.

The government said delayed reports from the tiny San Juan island indicated that 200 of the 600 inhabitants were crushed to death or drowned when the temblor demolished buildings and caused flooding.

Among the victims on the island were 25 students and teachers crushed beneath a collapsed school run by Roman Catholic nuns.

The San Juan toll raised to nearly 400 the number of dead in the quake, besides 200 missing and hundreds more injured. More than 200,000 people were left homeless.

The powerful quake, measuring 8.0 on the open-ended Richter scale, rumbled through the lowland jungles of Colombia's Pacific Coast before dawn Wednesday, destroying the primitive houses of the coastal towns and stirring up surging waters that caused further damage.

Aftershocks continued to rock the area Thursday, sending many residents of coastal villages fleeing into the streets in panic.

Rescue operations were hampered because of poor communications in the region, which has a scattered population and jungle terrain. Most of the roads in the area were cut off by the earthquake and some communities are accessible only by rivercraft or helicopter, even in normal times.

A Red Cross spokesman said the small island of San Juan just off the coast north of Tumaco, where the 200 bodies were counted today, apparently bore the full force of the earthquake centered in the ocean near the Colombia-Ecuador border.

Reports from travelers reaching the mainland from San Juan said the island's toll could go much higher. Nearly all the homes on the low-lying island were destroyed by the earthquake's force and surging seas.

Officials at Fiat shot

TURIN (Reuter) — Urban guerrillas shot and wounded two Fiat car company employees in the legs today and thieves thought to be guerrillas raided two other Fiat plants and escaped with $600,000.

Police said Adriano Albertino, 37, a department head at the Mirafiori body works, was in serious condition due to loss of blood after two men shot him when he arrived at work.

The Red Brigades guerrilla group later claimed responsibility, saying in a statement: "We have suspended (Albertino) from work. If he shows his face in the factory again we shall kill him."

A watchman at Fiat's Iveco commercial vehicle plant was shot in the leg shortly afterwards by two gunmen armed with a pistol and machine-gun.

At about the same time, police said eight bandits dressed as workers burst into Fiat's Rivalta press shop and escaped with wages due to be paid today to the plant's employees.

Mix a minor Soviet bureaucrat and a multi-billionaire shipping heiress in matrimony and what do you get? For one thing, Christina Onassis and Sergei Kauzov. For another, "irreconcilable differences" as grounds for divorce. Mrs. Kauzov's lawyers have made it official in Athens. She and Sergei are splitting after little more than a year, but she's giving him a small token to ease the pain — an oil tanker and a freighter of more than 50,000 tons.

Prince Charles says girls who kiss him may find they enjoy it more because he is a non-smoker. Three girls kissed the bachelor during his two-day visit to Nottingham in northern England, including one who embraced him "particularly aggressively, which gave me enormous pleasure," the prince told reporters. "It is just as well, I suspect, that I don't smoke, otherwise her reaction might have been quite different." The prince recalled that a fan recently gave him a T-shirt that said: "Kiss a non-smoker and taste the difference."

Sirhan Sirhan, convicted of the 1968 assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy, has asked a federal court to cut his California prison term. Sirhan, 35, a convict at Soledad state prison, contends authorities refuse to credit him for good behavior.

In California, singer Joan Baez won the seventh annual Earl Warren Civil Liberties Award for 1979, for her work in opposing the military draft and the death penalty.

Emily Dickinson cut herself off from the world to devote her life to reading and writing poetry because she was terrified she would go blind from a painful eye disorder. Dr. Martin Wand, a Hartford eye specialist, says photographs of the poet show she had an extreme case of exotropia — the medical term for wall-eye.

The man whose saying "tune in, turn on and drop out" became the watchword of the 1960s drug culture predicts enough states will drop out of the union during the 1980s to cause the U.S. to fall apart. Timothy Leary told students at the University of Missouri a resurgence of the sentiment of state rights would "make the 1960s look like a Boy Scout picnic."

Dear Abby:
Never did I think I'd be writing to you, but I am completely fed up with the despicable people who write in to criticize women who wear pants suits!

Two years ago when we moved to this small community I was eager to join a church. I asked someone if it was acceptable for a woman to wear pants suits to church. I was told, 'No, it is frowned upon.'

You see, Abby, for 20 years I've had terrible varicose veins, causing me constant pain, so I always wear heavy surgical stockings. For this reason I feel so much better in pants suits. Thank God for them!

Mrs. B. de Funiak

Dear Mrs. de F.:

Dear Abby:
You seem to get a lot of letters from people who place far too much importance on sex. I know it's important, Abby, but it's not nearly as important as most folks make it out to be. There are a lot of people in this world who manage to live without any sex at all. For example, look at all the nuns and priests. And what about some very fine unmarried people?

Spencer

Dear Spencer:
And some very fine married people, too.

Dear Abby:
How would you deal with a situation like this? Whenever our adopted daughter mentions an aunt or uncle, her husband says, 'You have no relatives. You're adopted!'

It really hurts our daughter.

Toronto

Dear Toronto:
Your son-in-law is not only unbelievably ignorant, he's cruel as well. He should be informed that an adopted person has twice as many relatives — the families of her adoptive parents and the families of her biological parents.

Dear Abby:
I'm a widow, 57, and I've been asked to some nice parties by a very fine gentleman. He's 53. Do you think he would like me less if he knew I had to wear a hearing aid? I wore it when I was with him the first time but I'm not sure he knows I wear one because I combed my hair over it.

How do men feel about this?

Embarrassed

Dear Embarrassed:
Many people wear eye glasses, which are an aid to better vision, so don't be embarrassed by a hearing aid — which is an aid to better hearing. If he's a 'fine' person, he won't like you less for it.

The man behind the scenes

By AUDREY JOHNSON

He came to Victoria in the fall of 1963 to attend university, majoring in music and art.

"It was my intention to teach those subjects but UVic's drama department sort of got in the way," he says.

The year 1964 was the Shakespeare quadricentennial and UVic was staging a Shakespeare Festival in which Bastion founder Peter Mannering was directing Richard III.

Mannering recruited him for the large cast and for subsequent Bastion plays, but it was soon evident to Penson that the design aspect was what he wanted to pursue.

"I was well aware of my limitations as an actor," he says.

But it was also clear to Penson that his knowledge of theatre design was marginal; that he needed and wanted to learn as much as he could absorb in that field.

By 1967 Penson had set out on the path he wanted to follow, the path that would take him thousandsof miles before it returned him to Victoria and Bastion Theatre in a professional capacity.

Busy supervising the execution of his set and costume designs for Life With Father, Art took time out of a busy day to talk about his experiences en route and the current state of his career.

Married for two years to Barbara Howatt, a production assistant at the National Arts Centre, at the present time Penson bases his peripetetic lifestyle in Ottawa.

He admits that being a designer in Canada is "pretty dodgy". "It's kind of a cut-throat profession really. The main trouble is that major theatres are hung up on hiring Europeans or Americans," he says. "It's the familiar story — if an artist comes from outside Canada he must be better than anything we have at home."

He gives as an example the Canadian Opera Company's competition for designs for an important production of Othello. The Associated Designers of Canada ("a sort of union") was informed and there were some 40 submissions — designs accompanied by scale models. Art Penson was one of the competitors who invested considerable time, energy and money in the project.

"The COC officials seemed reasonably impressed with my work but in the end not one of the 40 Canadian submissions made it. Someone from outside the country was selected for the job."

Although there are Canadian designers at Stratford they are seldom used for anything but the minor shows, says Penson.

His first "learning" move in '67 took him to Montreal where he worked in Expo at the Place des Arts. He then was offered a full scholarship by the then famous (now defunct) Pasadena Playhouse from which had come many stage and screen greats.

He stayed a year in California, then, deciding he needed to improve his drawing skills, he returned to Canada and entered the Kootenay School of Art at Nelson.

A stint in Ashland, Ore., as a costume assistant for the Shakespeare Festival provided him with experience in building armour and jewelry.

The way then led through the Vancouver Playhouse, to Stratford, Ont., to a period of European travel, Dublin's storied Abbey Theatre and a three-year sojourn in England.

He credits his experience in 1970 at Vancouver Playhouse where British designer Brian Jackson was working, as the springboard for most of what followed as well as for much of the expertise he acquired.

"Brian had originally been brought out to Stratford as designer," says Penson. "The Playhouse couldn't afford to take me on on a regular basis and Jackson encouraged me to go to Stratford and provided me with recommendations."

Penson worked at Stratford for two years. It was the period when top designers Tanya Moiseiwitsch, Desmond Heeley, Leslie Hurry and Annena Stubbs were resident and the experience was exhilerating and priceless. He wound up with a Canada Council arts bursary and a Tyrone Guthrie design award which provided him with an opportunity for overseas study.

After exploring theatres in European centres for a few months, he went to England where he found plenty of work in designing, property building, scene painting and as resident designer for the Belgrade Theatre in Coventry.

England is a sort of mecca for Canadian and American theatre people, he feels. "But we go there with our expectations too high. English theatre can be bad to mediocre just as on this side of the Atlantic; the only thing is that when they are at their best it's such a terrific best."

One of the very good things that happened to Art there was working with directors Peter Dews and David William. "They'd both directed at Stratford but I would never have had the chance to work with them in Canada," he says. He designed John Osborne's Look Back in Anger for Dews and Pygmalion for William.

The strangest — and perhaps the most hair-raising experience he had as a designer — was with Dublin's legendary Abbey Theatre.

He went over to do headdresses for a production of Oedipus Rex. The director was Michael Caccoyannis (Zorba the Greek).

"It was the most completely disorganized situation I've ever been in," says Art. "Nobody could make decisions and altogether there was a total lack of communication. I don't known how they ever got it all together but the production eventually went to the Edinburgh Festival and created quite a sensation there!"

"The English resident designer Alan Barlow was due to do Sean O'Casey's The Death and Resurrection of Mr. Roche, but he'd had the biscuit with the disorganization. He was about to leave and he recommended me to take over. Well the show eventually got on stage and was greeted with a vastly divided opinion by Dublin's two daily newspaper critics; from the one we got a flow of absolutely incredible hyperbole, while the other ripped it to shreds."

Penson next designed two shows for Sheffield's Crucible Theatre; Twelfth Night and David Hare's Slag. "It's a fine theatre designed by Moiseiwitsch along the lines of her Stratford Festival theatre but with a movable wall and other excellent modifications. A great joy to work in."

Since his return to Canada, Art Penson has worked on Benjamin Britten's opera treatment of Midsummer Night's Dream at the National Arts Centre and says the form has become his own dream: "I would give my right arm to do opera," he says.

He also says that he prefers freelancing to being a resident designer for one company.

"Even though it's unpredictable I enjoy relating to all the different people and the challenges one encounters in moving about the country and from one theatre situation to another.

Also he prefers to do both costumes and sets for a producton though this is not necessarily the way it's always assigned.

"When two different people are handling the project it can be trouble," he says. "If the costume designer and the set designer are at odds the production is likely to suffer. You'd be amazed at the venting of professional egos that can take place with little regard for the harm done."

Medics can't buy safe pot theories

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I teach in a high school where smoking pot has become almost a way of life. As hard as we try to control it, the problem seems to grow. All of these youngsters are aware that cigarette smoking has been ruled dangerous. But they seem to have the impression that marijuana is not a threat to their health. I believe it deserves an educational campaign to teach them the dangers inherent in the use of marijuana. Pressure from us, their teachers, seems to be totally inadequate.

Mrs. G.B.T.

Dear Mrs. T.:
It was not more than two decades ago that the dangers of cigarette smoking were so markedly emphasized. When first the surgeon-general of the United States reported that scientific studies had concluded that cigarette smoking was detrimental to health, there were many who refused to accept his statement. Time has supported the surgeon-general's warning. Chronic bronchitis and emphysema have destroyed the lives of thousands who might have continued to live as healthy, productive people. Heart disease, stroke, cancer of the larynx, cancer of the lung and vascular diseases have all shown proof-positive evidence of a relationship with tobacco.

And now it may take another 20 years before we recognize the massive damage that marijuana does to the lungs, the brain, the heart and to other organs of the body. Now, mind you, I am not getting involved in the legalistic aspects of marijuana. That is the job of the legislators.

The interest of doctors is the preservation of the health of many young people who refuse to give any heed to the possibility that smoking pot may be dangerous to their health.

Marijuana, like tobacco, contains chemicals which, when inhaled into the lungs, inflame the delicate lining of the bronchial tree. Protective cells are destroyed by the toxic fumes of marijuana and expose the lungs to infections and chronic diseases. The [illegible] Lung Association constantly emphasizes the dangers of marijuana. Dr. Donald P. Tashkin, of the University of California, definitively states: "Marijuana smoke contains 50 per cent more cancer-causing materials than tobacco smoke so the potential for causing lung cancer is real."

There is overwhelming evidence that the reflexes and the functioning capacity of the brain are diminished with marijuana. Hundreds of automobile deaths have been directly attributed to the loss of control of those who had been smoking even a small amount of "pot."

Science has never been down on anything beneficial or harmless to mankind.

Cart crash costs $192

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Robert Poole wasn't having much luck collecting payment for damages to his car by two unattended grocery carts — until he threatened to have a grocery store's lease sold.

His troubles started when two carts hit his car in a grocery store's lot.

He sent a claim with estimates of $192 for repairs to store headquarters.

When Kroger Foods officials said they would not pay, Poole filed suit in a small claims court.

When store representatives did not appear in court, a judge entered a default judgment of $100 plus $10 costs.

A month passed and Poole had not received the money. Then he learned he could legally specify that some piece of store property be sold to obtain the judgment.

He decided to specify the building lease and that got the attention of Kroger officials.

Dear Dr. Levine: I know you get letters all the time about young people not having boyfriends or girlfriends. They are told they're young and have plenty of time. It's probably right most of the time.

But what do you do when the years go by and you watch lots of people with dates and you find yourself getting older and alone? If you haven't been with anyone special of te' opposite sex for anything special — or simple for that matter — you can't help but feel that there's something wrong, you feel inferior.

I'm a 17-year-old girl, considered very attractive. I'm liked by both sexes on a friendship basis. I don't mind friendship. But no one seems to want to get to know me as more than a friend. Most of my friends have someone or have had someone. I've been telling myself for years the time will come but I've just about given up hope.

My life is watching TV every night while friends are having fun. I feel so alone and I don't feel loved. I've never been kissed. I don't know what's wrong with me.

Answer: You're right that this is a problem common to a lot of others both younger and older than you. And I know that my telling you that you've got time will infuriate you — you've already warned me. What often puzzles me is why this troubles some young people with such intensity, while others seem to take it with equanimity.

After all, it is not as if you're an individual who is shunned. By your own description, you are very attractive and it sounds like you have quite a few female and male friends, i.e. you are well liked.

The one thing that bothers you tremendously is the lack of an intense and meaningful heterosexual attachment. That's an elaborate way of saying boyfriend, but if you'll look closely, you'll see that there are different facets to that definition. We all need that kind of relationship. And it is lovely and frustrating for many of us to do without it.

If you are impatient, and can't get "out of yourself" and into activities, interests, and other pursuits, then you could perhaps examine the role you are playing in keeping guys at a distance — sometimes we give off vibes of aloofness when we mean nothing of the kind. Perhaps you can speak to your friends about how they see your concerns. Friends often can see things about us that we are unaware of ourselves. Are you engaged in activities when enable you to meet new people around your age?

I would only recommend a counsellor or therapist for you if things got so bad that your emotional health began to deteriorate. You are nowhere near that point, nor should you be. Perhaps I sound pollyanna-like to you, but I am very optimistic about your problems being overcome in fairly short order. In the meantime, don't become a recluse; there's a lot of living to do out there, with or without a boyfriend.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 14-year-old girl and have a problem with boys. There is this boy I am crazy about and would like to get to know him but he is very popular and has 10 different girls around him.

We had a school dance a few days ago. I danced with him a few times but that was all. I was too scared to talk to him because I don't know him. I would really like to get to know him more but how can I do that when there are so many girls around him?

Answer: I am sure that the you you want to get to know is a very nice boy, but are you sure that you want to be number 11? If he is the kind of person that is enjoying being the centre of attention for a large number of girls, and he hasn't singled out any particular girl, then the chances are that he is happy with this arrangement. Therefore if you are looking for a steady, caring relationship with someone who will think you are special, I would suggest you date other people.

You will face a lot of competition going after the boy you describe, and if you were too frightened to talk with him when you were alone and dancing with him, then I would also believe that at this point in time it would be difficult for the two of you to get to know each other. Give yourself a chance to date other boys, develop your self-confidence, and then if you still want to compete for him you will be better prepared. But in the meantime I think that you will find life more enuoyable, and you will feel better about yrself, if you date someone that would think it would be special to be dating you.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I have always been a believing Christian and a steady church goer, but my boyfriend and I have lived together for two years because we saw so many marriages turning bad and breaking up. Now when I go to my priest to be married, and when he sees that we both have the same address he says we have been living in sin and must live apart for six months before he'll marry us.

Other people I know have been living together but have shown separate addresses and they have been married. What's with the church anyway?

Answer: You need to find a priest with a better grasp of both the theology and the history of marriage. Your living together in good faith fulfils the two basic requirements the church came to see for Christian marriage: Consent and consummation. The third requirement, making the consent public before witnesses who represent the church, is a later development not always required by Canon Law.

In any case, to say you have been living in sin when you have been meeting the two basic requirements conscientiously is a terrible breach of pastoral care. It's a case of the officer of the church getting so tangled up in their own red ribbons that their ministry and honesty is undercut. No wonder so many couples like you give up on the church.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Dear Mike: My 1974 Volvo 164-E, which I bought used, delivers only 12 miles per gallon. Owners of similar models tell me they get up to 24 mpg. The car has plenty of pep and seems to run fine. What can I do to improve mileage? — Crossed Fingers

Dear Crossed: Begin by having the fuel-injection system checked. But the problem could have any number of single or inter-related causes, including dragging brakes, low automatic transmission fluid, driving conditions, etc., etc.

Dear Mike: On these wet, cold mornings, I have a devil of a time starting my 1972 Fiat 128. I've replace the distributor cap. The ignition wires look new. Should I spray these wires with plastic spray? — Hard to Start

Dear Hard: I'd first replace the ignition wires and sparkplug boots. If you decide to use an ignition waterproofing spray, be sure you remove all wires and other electrical components, degrease them thoroughly, and spray each one on all sides. If you spray an ignition system in place, you'll only shield the exposed surfaces and probably won't hit areas that leak electricity.

Dear Mike: I'm retired and drive very little. I put about 4,000 miles on my 1971 Chevrolet each year. The odometer now registers 54,000 miles. My problem is oil consumption. The car burns about a quart per 1,000 miles! There are no leaks that I can see. Should I: 1) continue to pour in oil; 2) repair the engine; 3) replace the engine; 4) buy a new car? — Fogger

Dear Fogger: The answer depends largely on your budget. What you might do is have the problem diagnosed by a competent mechanic so you'll know how much an overhaul or engine replacement will cost. Keep in mind that it's nearly always cheaper to repair your present car than to buy a brand new one, but that a good used car often makes a sensible compromise.

At six months to a year, children may be able to walk a few steps, but most of them still find it quicker and easier to crawl. They need toys for the periods when they are allowed, while supervised, to creep about the floor and for the periods when they are confined to a playpen or crib. At about nine months, children may begin to stand and walk. The will be unsteady and will fall readily so remember the dangers of hard, sharp toys. Here are some tips to help you buy toys for children aged six months to a year:

If possible, watch a child of this age before you go to buy. Learn what you can about the skill level and play interests of children this age.

Look on toy containers for recommended age ranges' but use your common sense too. Do not make the mistake of buying something "too advanced" for the child.

Bear in mind the size and strength of the child and do not buy something too big or heavy to be handled.

Make sure that the toy is safe. Because a child of this age group is unsteady and topples readily, protrusions, rough or sharp edges, should be avoided. Even a dull point can injure a child if fallen on from a standing position.

Christmas meal on ice

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Christmas dinner for Don Knight and his family will be eaten this year in a hotel dining room far from home.

At 32, three-time Canadian figure skating champion Knight is older than most of the professional skaters with the show and has been living out of a suitcase most of his adult life.

"Skaters peak in their late 20's," he explains over coffee at the Empress, where the 80-member cast and crew is staying while performing in Victoria this week.

If injury doesn't force an early end to a career, exhaustion might. A skater works six days a week during a 10-month, 32 city season and often spends the seventh day travelling to the next town.

The troupe gets a week-long break after its Wednesday-Sunday appearance here and then its back to work.

It's a hectic life, but Don and wife Janet Runn, a professional skater since the age of 13, haven't tired of it yet.

And neither has two-year-old daughter Kelly Lyn, who travels along.

An Ontario native, Don says he and Janet are thinking of retiring in a few years to concentrate on turning a couple of pizza establishments they own in Hamilton and Burlington into a restaurant chain.

Don represented Canada in the world and Olympic games and turned professional after winning the North American championships in 1967.

"I could have gone on to the worlds in '68 and probably the Olympics," he said. But the strain and expense of being a world class amateur athlete convinced him to turn pro.

Touring with different ice shows provided the opportunity to see North America and most of Europe, and the chance to perform in Russia. Don has been with Ice Capades, either teaching or performing, eight years.

A performer's salary is substantial, but the hours are long and rigorous.

Although Don puts in about 10 minutes ice time during the two-and-a-half hour spectacle, he arrives early for a warmup and then goes on to makeup and costuming. He must be in the wings ready to go on at least two numbers ahead in case another artist is unable to perform for some reason.

Add to that about two hours daily practice and coaching the understudies that fill in for regulars and that takes care of most of the day.

The biggest challenge about turning professional, is learning showmanship, says Don, a strong and technically precise skater.

His three-and-a-half minute solo is heavily dramatic and one of the few serious moments in a show that consists of jazz, flashy disco and comedy type routines.

Pre-performance jitters are still part of the job, even after so many years.

Losing enthusiasm is one of the biggest problems a professional skater has to face and Don fights his occasional lack of energy by giving himself a lecture before a show and talking himself into a good performance.

He has nothing but admiration for former Canadian champion Toller Cranston, who performed with Ice Capades three times this year.

Cranston's artistry and his poetic, ballet-like stlye on ice drew raves from critics and opened the door to more expressive, interpretive movements for male skaters.

He's an individualist who makes his own rules, Don says.

"He's arrogant — I don't mean that in a bad way. To create that type of charisma and project it to 12,000 people is very difficult."

It takes a lot of talent for one person to fill an entire arena and keep an audience entranced.

"There isn't another stage that big anywhere."

Tips on treeing

By HUMPHREY DAVY

For a start, be sure the tree won't dry out and become a fire hazard.

The best bet is to place the tree in a bucket of wet sand or a container which holds water.

But before doing so, cut the bottom of the tree diagonally about an inch above the bottom of the tree. If you don't, the sap is likely to seal off the original cut.

Christmas trees should be kept away from drapes, curtains, fireplaces and other potential hazards.

Be sure to check the electrical wiring of your lights and when going out for the evening turn them off.

B.C. Hydro has asked its customers — as a conservation measure — to refrain from turning on the lights in the peak load period between 5 and 7 p.m.

Most conservation-minded people today get their trees from tree lots instead of cutting them in wilderness areas or on Crown land.

Bruce Holloway, the B.C. forest ranger at Langford, says there are no public-owned forest lands on southern Vancouver Island.

"Christmas tree cropping on privately-owned land or land belonging to a logging company could result in trespassing charges, unless permission is given," he warns.

But the main thing to look for is a freshly cut tree. This will ensure the needles will stay on throughout Christmas.

Highchair a hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-chairs can present a hazard to children, says the U.S. Consumer Product safety Commission. Officials say more than 7,500 children are treated annually in the U.S. for injuries associated with high-chairs. The safety devices on the chair always should be used, they say, and children must never be allowed to stand up in their chairs.

Hydrants lined up for giving

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Board of Water Commissioners says it has the perfect gift for pet owners who like to remember their dogs at Christmas.

A board spokesman Friday said 22 fire hydrants were among numerous surplus items to be sold to the highest bidder Dec. 19.

The official said although the hydrants are inoperable, they have "a good external appearance and would make unique conversation pieces.

"And, what family's pet pooch wouldn't wag its tail with delight to have its very own hydrant in the back-[illegible] the spokesman said.

OF RECENT WATERCOLORS

By Egoyan

Joseph Egoyan

Since his last art showing at the Provincial Museum (almost 10 years ago) Egoyan did very little in art work. Recently, however, he has started again with a new approach and concept to the subject matter and technical expression. The theme now is "Scenes & Flowers" in watercolor — unlike the previous theme of "Birds" in oil painting. The new work is totally original and everyone is cordially invited to see the display at

Mixed bag for Santa

A girl named Jennie wrote, "I want to tell you some of the things I want for Christmas but first I want to tell you why I am writing this letter. See, I don't know if I believe in you or not.

"Maybe I believe there is a Santa, but I don't think I believe he flys flying reindeer and comes down from the chimney and comes to my house. I want to know if there is a Santa or not. Could you send me a letter, and if you do, be sure to say who it's from."

But there's still plenty of mail from the true believers.

Annie, 8, had a confession for Santa. "I have been a bad girl," she wrote. "But I am trying to make up to everyone."

Corinne wrote Santa, "I have been especially good this year." Then, apparently suffering a conscience attack, she amended her boast to, "Well, I haven't been terrific but I am sure I was better than last year."

Another youngster showed the right instincts by giving Santa a few pointers about his home.

"There is no chimney," he said. "You have to come through the back door."

volunteering

In past months, this column has focused on the wide variety of volunteer opportunities Victoria has to offer. Organizations in the fields of education, health, mental health, social service, corrections, recreation, culture and the environment have a constant need for volunteers to help with their programs.

At Christmas time, people often become acutely aware of needs in the community and have the desire to reach out and help. Christmas volunteers can help to make a difficult season bearable, even enjoyable, for those in need of support. However, the need for community involvement is not limited to Christmas — it continues throughout the year. Many people, at this time of year, make resolutions to share their time, energy and enthusiasm with others on a continuing basis. Such a commitment has a lot to offer the volunteer — a chance to meet new people, gain valuable work experience, have fun, help people, and pass leisure time in a constructive way.

Volunteers often become indispensible to the quality of community programs. The National Advisory Council on Voluntary Action in its report People in Action states that "volunteering is active citizenship.

"It is people accepting a real responsibility for shaping their communities and their country and acting in some way on that responsibility.

"It is all that people do when they act of their own free will. In other words, it is people participating."

"The Victoria Volunteer Bureau would like to thank all those who have volunteered their time in 1979. The community is vitally enriched through your efforts," says bureau worker Margaux Finlayson.

For those who are interested in finding out more about volunteer opportunities in the community, the bureau welcomes calls at 386-2269. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Publication of this column will resume in the new year.

soap opera scene

Syndicate infiltrates TV hospital

By JOHN GOUDAS

Bobbie Spencer's (Jackie Zeman) brother Luke (Anthony Geary), a tough kid, had orders to polish off Mitch for the syndicate, but Luke, a novice at hits, is talked out of the killing by Laura.

As Hospital fans know, it was Luke who raped Laura not too many weeks ago. Now the victim and the rapist are buddies, with Luke determined to win the young bride over. Luke also realizes you don't walk away from the syndicate. Since he can't get out, the man decides to remain a bad guy. That means all sorts of power plays appear in Luke's future, a key character in Hospital's sexy, hyperactive plotting.

Thus Luke Spencer's street kid comes across as an emotional villain among disciplined, educated medics and provides Utah's young Anthony Geary with a choice role.

Geary, a 6'2" dark blond, has been on the show all of six months. Jack Albertson, the old pro, found Tony on stage at the University of Utah, and put him in the touring company of The Subject Was Roses.

After a Los Angeles stage run, Tony began hustling TV series parts, landing spots in Streets of San Francisco, Starsky & Hutch, Barnaby Jones and the movie, Johnny Got His Gun.

Anthony Geary and Jackie Zeman

Albertson, just seen with Mary Martin in ABC's Valentine, says the kid from Coalville, Utah, has all the essentials, including a healthy curiosity.

Channel Chatter: David Greenan, who as Dr. Greg Fairbanks on Guiding Light is involved with sisters Rita and Eve, will pop up in the prime-time movie; The Man in the Santa Claus Suit. Shown on NBC, Sunday, Dec. 23, the film stars Fred Astaire, Gary Burghoff and Bert Convy. . . .

Millee Taggart (Janet Collins on Search for Tomorrow) has been beaming since her seven-year-old daughter, heather, was accepted at George Balanchine's School of American Ballet. . . .

Plot Portents. Alex knows Stephanie's true identity on Days of Our Lives, and will put the info to good use for himself. With Alex moving in on all fronts, Bob Anderson's reign at the company is in jeopardy.

Suzanne was foiled with her sleeping pill ruse on The Young and the Restless, but the determined crazy has other plans. Watching Leslie wander around New York, back on her lost-self routine, you realize half the show's characters are bonkers.

Roger's coffin is opened on Guiding Light, and the pathologists are puzzled by what they see. Hope is terribly concerned about Alan's possible involvement with Roger, and Katie continues in hot pursuit of Mark.

Siobhan and Joe's trip is cut short on Ryan's Hope. Roger is on the warpath and Maeve is perplexed by Jack's behavior.

Kelly returns to jail on All My Children, and Carl Jr. makes some progress. Also, things are not any better for Erica.

Mario and Edwina have a misunderstanding on One Life to Live. Tina is flattered by Ivan's attention and Maggie pulls a fast one on Bo.

Deborah is the subject of a frightening news report on Edge of Night. Meanwhile Miles suspects Mrs. Cory.

Pamela Suggests . . .

Bertolucci film wasted

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Bernardo Bertolucci's Luna is a dull, slow-moving and murky story about a famous opera singer who finds her relationship with her son becoming cold and turns to incest out of desperation.

Talented actress Jill Clayburgh, who won the Cannes Film Festival best actress award last year for her performance in an An Unmarried Woman, is fine to watch, but the movie wanders around in circles without focus, much like its aimless main characters.

The lush, textured photography of Vittorio Storaro (who spent 18 months filming Francis Coppola's Apocalypse Now) is beautiful and there are some breathtaking scenes of Italian ruins and of the countryside and the Mediterranean. Filming was done mainly in Rome and locations include a fifteenth century palazzo, the Rome Opera House and its summer home, the ancient Baths of Caracalla.

Unfortunately, the talented cast and crew are wasted in this empty film. Bertolucci (Last Tango in Paris, 1900) is a subtle and sensitive directer who paints a touching portrait of a mother's overwhelming love for her son and her frustration at not being able to reach him; but he lacks the control and the power to give the movie the driving force it needs to keep film moving.

The scenes between Clayburgh, as the opera star Caterina Silveri, and her heroin-addicted 15-year-old son Joe, played by Matthew Barry are tense, at times electrifying. However, their relationship bogs down because it is difficult to follow. Incest and its motivation are difficult subjects and half the time the audience has no idea what's going on, and as the movie progresses cares less and less.

American-born Caterina takes her son to Rome, where she is a guest performer with the opera company, after the death of her husband. She discovers her son is a dope addict and that she can't communicate with him. During a severe bout of withdrawal, she comforts him with her body and continues to do so, maternally at first, but gradually her motives become deeper and more complex and she finds herself initiating encounters that terrify the boy.

Their incestuous relationship is symbolized by luna, the moon, the great shining orb that has a dark, cold side no one ever sees. The ripe full moon is seen over and over again. It rises over a movie house where Joe is having his first sexual encounter after shooting up; at an opera house where his mother is singing on stage the moon and stars are the backdrop; and the moon hangs heavily over hot August nights in Rome.

Canada's oil future bleak, U.S. energy study reveals

WASHINGTON (CP) — A study prepared for the U.S. Senate energy committee says Canada faces a bleak outlook for oil supplies in the near future and might not achieve Ottawa's goal of energy self-sufficiency by 1990.

Prepared by Melvin Conant, a specialist on international energy issues, the study says there are several factors that take the glow off the temporary surplus in oil production capacity that Canada now enjoys.

The most important of these factors include rapidly growing demands of an oil-based economy, the depletion of conventional oil fields and prohibitive development costs for bringing huge oil sands and heavy oil deposits to the commercial production stage.

Analysing Canadian prospects, the report notes it is Ottawa's policy now to encourage substitution of natural gas for oil to meet expanding energy requirements. There is about a 10-year surplus of gas supplies in the country.

"However, because the effective implementation of new policies, and especially of energy substitution, requires long lead times, the energy prospect for the coming decade is not particularly bright," the report says.

Even with promotion of conservation and of substitution of gas for oil, domestic demand for oil is likely to grow at an annual rate of 1.5 per cent a year until the mid-1980s, by one per cent from 1986 through 1990 and by one per cent a year after that, even by Canadian government estimates.

". . . Even if the energy growth rate remains at such a low level — which may seem over-optimistic, especially in the case of a significatnt economic recovery — the gap between oil production capacity and projected requirements goes on growing, from a 148,000-barrels-per-day gap in 1978 to an 857,000-barrels-per-day gap in 1985 and 948,000-barrels-per-day gap in 1995," the study suggests.

The study, published under the signature of Senator Henry Jackson (Dem.—Wash.), who chairs the energy committee, urges speeded-up development of ordinary crudes in Mexico and of unconventional oils from shale, tar sands and heavy oil in the United States, Canada and Venezuela.

Canada has made a start, but it's time for the United States to "deepen and extend these initiatives" first in its own country and then by assisting others, the study urges. The United States has the money and the expertise to do so, the study says.

"It ought to seem incongruous for Canadians to read that the latest forecast for its supply from domestic sources leaves a gap, in 1985, or about one million barrels per day, against a possible 200 billion barrels to be obtained from its tar sands and heavier oils."

The study suggests the problem is so great that it "calls for a mobilization of resources which only government can muster and an application of those skills which have made the U.S. oil industry pre-eminent."

Larry de la Hay has to make do in sparsely furnished castle office

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A couple of months preparation, two hectic weeks of upheaval and then the Victoria Conservatory of Music, like an over-stuffed Victorian lady, cuts its corset strings and expands with a deep sigh of satisfaction.

After a decade of incredible growth that has seen the Conservatory overwhelm its accommodation at Craigdarroch Castle, the institution, this week and next, moves more than 1,400 students, faculty and staff of 120, equipment including a comprehensive music library and more than 40 pianos, to the John Di Castri-designed St. Ann's Annex on the perimeter of Beacon Hill Park.

There the entire personnel, bag and baggage, will flow into 56 sound-proofed studios, a spacious library, several classrooms, and adequate administration and faculty rooms.

The Annex has been made available by the provincial government with assistance from the Lottery Fund and under the sponsorship of Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

Principal Robin Wood, looking around the emptying castle rooms, says with a touch of nostalgia: "Some wonderful things have happened here. This place was a godsend when we outgrew the first small building on Pandora. We'll be eternally grateful to the city for accommodating our decade of growth. Without the castle there would probably be no conservatory today.

"But for the last couple of years the crowding situation has become increasingly difficult and inhibiting."

But the move is not without accompanying problems. The 56 studios and other areas have to be furnished and equipped. In order to finance this aspect the Conservatory board has launched its first major public fund-raising campaign — the objective $250,000.

The more than 1,700 lessons a week given by the Conservatory faculty will start in the new studios and classrooms after Christmas as the Century move together into a new decade.

More parking lot despite doubts

Canada Safeway's plan to enlarge the parking lot at its Foul Bay Road store was approved by city council Thursday night over the objections of some aldermen who said it means demolishing three houses on Bourchier Street in the midst of a housing shortage.

Ald. John Cooper said there is a rental housing crisis in Victoria and by endorsing Safeway's plan council is aggravating the shortage of affordable accommodation.

"I don't know many alternatives to roofs over heads," he said.

"I'm really doubtful about going through with this at this time," said Ald. Robin Blencoe. "I've seen too many houses lost to parking lots and other uses. I think it would be a bad move."

Safeway is a good corporate citizen, Blencoe added, but many of the people who shop there are also looking for housing.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the plan has the backing of most of the residents of the area. It will help preserve the family-oriented atmosphere of the neighborhood by cutting out some of the traffic on side streets.

Ald. Bob Wright said council had no right to interfere. Safeway has already bought the three houses and could not be denied a demolition permit if it applied, he said.

Blencoe and Cooper were joined in opposition by Ald. Gretchen Brewin but the plan was passed by a 5-3 vote. It now goes to a public hearing on Safeway's bid to rezone from residential to commercial at the next council meeting Jan. 3.

Council also approved the sale of the north end of Amphion Street to Safeway for the parking lot scheme, which will add 70 new spaces and see the existing parking lot extensively landscaped with trees and shrubs. The price for the 128-foot length of city street was $120,000.

'First Bite' gobbles $46 million

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Love At First Bite, the comedic Dracula movie, has earned $46 million so far and has hyped the career of producer Robert Kaufman beyond his wildest dreams.

As a result of the film's runaway success, Kaufman has signed a nine-picture contract with American International Pictures-Filmways. AIP released Love At First Bite.

Each of his new movie projects, to be completed in five years, will have a minimum $4 million budget.

Independent producers and studios are looking for blockbusters, movies that earn upwards of $50 million rather than a succession of modest hits. Big bucks build careers, create power bases and attract better scripts and bigger stars.

Kaufman began as a writer with a dozen movies to his creit, among them Freebie and the Bean, Getting Straight and Divorce American Style. He's written 34 TV pilots of which only two made it to the air.

Until Love At First Bite, Kaufman, a gruff, talkative man in his mid-40s, was not exactly setting the world afire. But one enormous hit has given him considerable clout in Hollywood.

Justified or not, Kaufman's instant success has encouraged him to compare himself with Woody Allen, Mel Brooks, Neil Simon, Marty Feldman and other contemporary comedy writer-producers.

"We're all Jewish," Kaufman said. "But there are really two schools of Jewish comedy on film. Almost all of us are from New York. Feldman is from the slums of London which are even worse than New York's.

"Mel Brooks and Woody Allen are from Brooklyn's nebbish school of losers. Their heroes are looking for gentile dates. They suffer from Jewish cultural jet lag. They are victims of society. They are schnooks and schlemiels.

"Simon and I are more from the school of angry Jewish writers. We're from Manhattan, not Brooklyn. We know about gentile girls. We spent time going to museums, not trying to sneak into Ebbets Field. It's a different Jewish culture.

"There's a difference in attitude between kids growing up in Brooklyn and Manhattan. We didn't go hungry in Manhattan. And while we didn't like our mothers and fathers, we understood them. We went to college.

"The Brooklyn kids didn't to to college. They didn't like their parents and felt guilty about it. Like that was their problem, see. To them the world is a hostile place that is out to get them.

"The heroes of Manhattan Jewish writers are unwilling victims. The Brooklyn variety whine and beg for mercy. Ours fight like hell even when they're losing.

"The whole moral of Love At First Bite is that a girl is better off with a monster like Dracula than a nebbish like the guy played by Richard Benjamin.

"Another thing about the Brooklyn nebbish heroes — Mel, Woody and Feldman — they are all under 5-foot-10. Little guys. Simon's heroes and my heroes are tall, like Benjamin."

Kaufman's faith in the future of comedy is vouchsafed in his two unreleased films, Nothing Personal with Donald Sutherland and Suzanne Somers, and How to Beat The High Cost of Living with Jessica Lange, Jane Curtain and Susan St. James.

"Actually, three kinds of pictures are doing well these days — comedy, horror and an occasional love story," Kaufman said. "People want their movies funny, scary or touching — something to divert older people and involve the young.

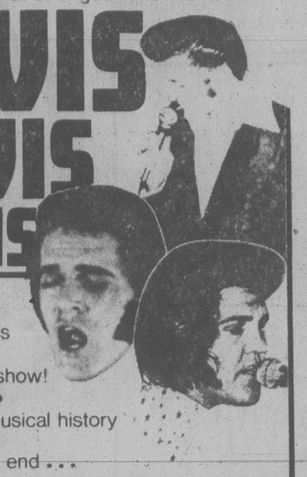

"You shouldn't have to spend more than $5 million to make a good comedy these days. And you don't have to make a great movie to be a success. Love At First Bite wasn't great except at the box office.

"You can make big pictures without big stars. They only want to work once every two or three years anyway, and they demand a fortune. And top directors aren't that available either.

"The thing we've got to do in Hollywood is build up a new generation of stars. The younger generation of moviegoers, 12 to 25, doesn't care about stars. And they represent 80 per cent of the box office.

Somenos eyed for hotel

DUNCAN — The battle to save Somenos Flats, a swampy, grassy bird sanctuary just north of the city limits, resumed this week when North Cowichan council was presented with a proposal for a three-storey, 84-room hotel.

Joe Silva, president of Tops auto dealership, said the project calls for construction on two lots covering 7.16 acres. More than half the property is zoned for agricultural use.

Sannich eyes towaway rules

Council's bylaw enforcement committee has recommended a revamped bylaw to regulate the towing business.

The committee made the decision after discovering that Gordon's Towing Ltd. was operating without a business licence earlier this year.

Alan Murray, 3938 Cedar Hill Crossroad, complained to the committee that five cars, including his, were towed away from Village Park Estates on Gordon Head Road.

Gordon's Towing charged $25 for return of the cars, while other operators fees usually range from $14 to $18, Murray said.

Plans shelved for Canadian pipeline section

CALGARY (UPC) — Construction plans for the $4 billion Canadian sections of the $15 billion Alaska highway gas pipeline have been shelved and new plans will be proposed, the Canadian companies involved have announced.

Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. said Thursday it was not licensed by the National Energy Board to export enough natural gas to the United States to warrant proceeding with present construction plans.

In Washington, the U.S. Energy Department said it was "concerned" with the decision by Pan-Alberta and its partners — Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd, Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. and Westcoast Transmission Co.

Under the plan, sections of the main pipeline system in Alberta and the U.S. Pacific Northwest would be built ahead of the scheduled 1985 completion date. A western leg had been expected to start carrying gas to California in 1980 and an eastern leg to Illinois by 1981.

The NEB granted licenses recently approving export of 3.7 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the United States. Pan-Alberta's volumes were "limited and conditioned" by the NEB, the gas companies said, however.

"The particular volumes and term are too short for proper financing feasibility," the companies said of the Canadian pre-build section.

"It will be necessary for the sponsors to develop another plan for further consideration. This will require at least weeks of new design and negotiation."

The NEB allowed full delivery of the gas in the first three-year period of the eight-year permit, but thereafter annual volumes would be reduced from about 1.4 billion cubic feet by 25 percent to 1987. Pan-Alberta was licensed to export about half the total amount approved by the NEB.

The gas companies said when the NEB issued its gas export licenses "the companies which have put preconstruction effort and funds into the pipeline have received a less favorable position than others which had either avoided or contested against the pipeline."

Foothills president Robert Pierce said "this has hurt our partners from a psychological standpoint, and it's going to take a little time to redirect our effort.

Westcoast Transmission president Edwin Phillips said he hoped "some new proposal could be developed as soon as possible in order that further delay is not introduced to the over-all Alaska highway gas pipeline project."

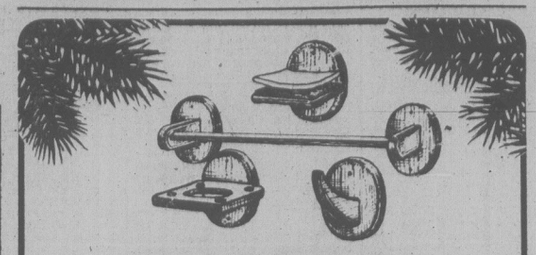

A U.S. energy department spokesman said "the U.S. government shares the Canadian government's concern over these statements and notes that the project's sponsors will be discussing these matters further with appropriate officials of the Canadian government.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Take short walk, find signs of life

The rush that most folks nowadays find themselves in before Christmas needs the contrast of quiet moments spent outdoors among other living things.

Nature is never in an unseemly rush, especially at this season.

If you have a garden, take even 15 minutes in a day to walk alone there, looking, really looking at whatever interests you.

No garden because you live in an apartment or a room? You are then likely to have at least one plant in a container or you would be inclined to skip this column. Or you have many plants either indoors or on a balcony or sundeck.

Because we live in a climatically-favored spot, there will be life showing in every planted area locally. Rarely can we say that winter is a time of dead sticks in the garden or on the balcony. Look for signs of life and surely you will find them.

The old-fashioned Flowering-quince, beloved of gardeners in moderate climates for generations under the name of Cydonia japonica, will show you numerous fat round flower buds on bare twigs. Already tinged with color even though partially protected with a green calyx, the buds are a promise of brilliant orange-scarlet to come.

Early in 1980 they will open when a week-long mild spell warms the air around them.

Some gardeners will be on the watch for plant material to use in table decorations. As quiet contrast to bright colors, take a look at lovely fresh green pieces of Laurustinus, another old favorite. This is a fine broad-leaved evergreen shrub whose clusters of coral flower buds are now opening to chalk white small flowers.

Appearing at the top of every growth more than a year old, the buds and the flowers offer that pleasing freshness that is seen when displayed with their own foliage.

Occasionally the use of a mass of evergreen foliage, such as Laurustinus, may be allowed to show off flowers having no leaves of their own at this time. But be cautious not to smother the flowers with the foliage or the result may be grotesque rather than beautiful.

Among the houseplants, your 15-minute break from the rush will reveal new growth or new bud formation on succulent indoor plants of tropical regions. These signs normally show by the end of our fall season, making new growth, or producing flowers during our winter.

If you have crassulas, which include Chinese-jade, or Kalanchoes including the Scarlet Christmas Kalanchoe, you are already seeing the buds on the plants.

Look at these plants with a hand lens if you feel the flowers lack glamor. You will get a pleasant surprise.

The hand magnifying glass (or lens) will bring to new life the true flowers of the Poinsettia. The green flower buds are now opening to show the intricate real flowers. Examine them for a few of your 15 minutes. You will have something new to think about as you see for the first time the group of scarlet anthers each topped with gold. You then realize why we say that the large scarlet (or pink or white) leafy bracts are indeed bracts and not the true flowers.

In balcony tubs that have clumps of early daffodils (second year of planting) it is likely you'll find green tips showing two inches above soil level. Given a sunny sheltered corner on the balcony, or sundeck, these may delight you early in 1980 with golden blooms.

What you find in your 15-minute period of peace and quiet may bring a long-lasting effect for the season.

Call girl vice ring flighty

EDMONTON (UPC) — Fly-in prostitutes have been lured to oil-wealthy Edmonton, police discovered after one of the city's largest anti-vice operations broke a major prostitution ring with links in Vancouver, Calgary, Toronto and New York.

City police Staff Sergeant Frank Ashworth said Thursday a series of synchronized raids were conducted the day before in Edmonton and Vancouver. Fourteen men and women were arrested and charged with conspiracy to live off the avails of prostitution.

"It was a fairly well-organized ring with a considerable amount of money involved," Ashworth said.

The month-long investigation revealed that women were being flown into Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary — sometimes with their pimps — to work the cities on almost a rotation basis.

"It's difficult to say just how long they were operating. When the heat comes on here and they're chased out they open up in other cities," he said.

Ashworth said the ring had indirect links with organized crime syndicates in New York and Toronto.

"I wouldn't say it was a direct link but some of the pimps were from Toronto and New York and so we believe there was at least a money connection."

Ashworth said some of the women were earning as much as $500 a night in Edmonton.

Further arrests were expected, Ashworth said.

U.S. gov't hits oil firms for $9B in price citations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citations against the 15 top oil firms in a continuing federal investigation of pricing violations reached the $8.9 billion mark Thursday with announcement of $1.1 billion in charges against Mobil and Amerada Hess.

The Energy Department's Office of Special Counsel charged Mobil with $504.5 million in violations in 12 separate citations. Hess was hit with eight violations for a total of $635.5 million.

All the charges, which the agency said do not imply wrongdoing, stemmed from actions by the companies during the period from August 1973 to December 1976.

If violations occurred, said a Mobil spokesman, they were the result of complex and confusing agency pricing rules for which Mobil repeatedly sought official interpretation, but often received no help.

"Having been through this before, we are certain we will be vindicated in the end, just as we were last month when an appeals court agreed with us and a lower court that the DOE had improperly refused to allow Mobil to include in its prices more than $200 million in costs since 1974," the spokesman said.

"There is no reason for disputes to become so large other than the fact that DOE is extremely reluctant to clarify its regulations."

The total amount of federal oil pricing violations uncovered in the agency's two-year investigation of the 15 major refiners now totals to $8.9 billion. The investigation, ordered James Schlesinger when he was energy secretary, is expected to conclude before Jan. 1.

The latest citations, excluding interest and possible penalties, brought total violations to $979 million alleged against Mobil and about $915 million against Hess, an agency official said. Both firms have 30 days to respond to the new charges.

Last September, Mobil agreed to $13.7 million in penalties for alleged violations, but is challenging most charges.

The major charges against Mobil involve discrepancies in calculation of costs passed to customers; violations of regulations requiring customers to be billed during price controls on the same terms they were during a 1973 base period; and misapplication of pricing formulas.

Hess also was accused of changing the terms of customer billing, faulty calculations and failing to apply cost increases equally among their customers.

SEATTLE (AP) — Greenpeace-Alaska wants residents of the other 49 states to protest an Alaska fish and game department plan to license the killing of about 300 wolves by aerial hunters.

Will Anderson, executive director of the environmental organization, said here Wednesday that Greenpeace is seeking what would amount to a moratorium on the hunt until it can be determined how many wolves there are in Alaska.

Estimates range from 8,000 to 15,000, he said, and more than 1,000 wolves are killed each year by means other than aerial hunting.

Some groups in Alaska have charged that wolves are responsible for a decrease in the number of moose and caribou, but groups such as Greenpeace have argued that wolves are merely being made a scapegoat for past mismanagement of game herds.

Anderson urged that letters be sent to Alaska Governor Jay Hammond and Dr. Ronald Skoog, Alaska fish and game department commissioner. He said letters should be sent immediately because aerial hunting will begin as soon as there is enough snow to track the wolves from the air.

By TYLER MARSHALL
Los Angeles Times

NEW DELHI — With India's seventh general election less than a month away, former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi appears to be increasing the distance between herself and her political rivals.

A recent poll puts Mrs. Gandhi's Congress—I (the I stands for Indira) Party 10 points ahead of the ruling Janata Party. Whether she can remain there in the final weeks of the campaign is subject to debate, but she shows no signs of faltering.

Some observers still believe it is doubtful that her party can win a majority of the 542 parliamentary seats that will be at issue in the voting scheduled for Jan. 3 and 6, but her chances of winning a plurality — and the possibility of heading a coalition government — are rated as excellent.

Indeed, many analysts now believe that Mrs. Gandhi could become one of the rare autocratic rulers ever to lose, and then regain, power through the ballot box. She and her party were crushed in the last general election, in March, 1977, by an electorate frightened of wholesale jailings, curtailment of basic liberties and the brutal family-planning program that characterized her government under 21 months of emergency rule. The emergency dominated the last months of her 11 years as prime minister.

Early this year, she was still in the political wilderness. Expelled from parliament for misconduct, she faced the prospect of a long trial and prison for excesses under the emergency.

But last summer's collapse of the ruling Janata Party, a sharply deteriorating law-and-order situation, industrial anarchy and rocketing inflation all combined to propel Mrs. Gandhi back into the spotlight as a potential savior.

"There is a feeling that the nation is adrift and no one is doing anything about it," one political analyst said.

The clumsy performance of those who succeeded Mrs. Gandhi in power has given rise to a belief that only she can save the country, while faded memories of her emergency excesses and basic Hindu forgiveness have made her a frontrunner.

When asked at a recent news conference whether people still feared her, she smiled confidently and replied:

"Quite the contrary. I've been hugged by more men and women in India than anyone, and I see no fear in their eyes."

More than any other politician in India, Indira Gandhi takes her case to the people. While her opponents have spent much of the last three months trying to settle petty squabbles within their parties or pot-shotting at rivals from their New Delhi offices, she has been on the campaign trail, maintaining a punishing pace.

On a recent swing through the southern states of Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka, she spent 41 1-2 hours on the road, covered 500 miles a day, made 22 stops and delivered 12 speeches.

According to those who have followed her over the years, the pace was typical.

Despite the loss of some key election strategists as the result of two party splits in the last two years, her campaign appears to be extremely well-organized. One recent tour, scheduled to be made by helicopter, was successfully converted almost overnight into a road tour when the helicopter was damaged.

As she moves through the country, she hammers at the records of her successors — Morarji Desai and Charan Singh.

"Since I have been out of power, everything has gone wrong," she tells the crowds.

With India suffering from inflation that has rocketed from zero to 20 percent in the last 12 months, from fuel and commodity shortages and a major drought, her message has a ring of truth. Her party's manifesto, issued last week, makes all the expected commitments to democracy, secularism and socialism, guarantees press freedom and even promises a job for at least one adult member of each family — a tall order in India where unemployment, by official count, is nearly 14 million.

So far, she has made no attempt to apologize for her emergency rule. Indeed, many of those most closely connected with the emergency excesses, including her 32-year-old son Sanjay, make up her small inner circle of aides.

Despite the apparent resurgence of support and the ineffective performances of her leading opponents, she still faces difficulties. Political analysts cite several factors that they feel will work against her.

"She's a one-person party," Surendra Mohan, general secretary of the Janata Party, said. "She has to cover the entire country herself, while we have a number of well-known leaders who can campaign for local candidates."

Independent observers agree. They point out that her party controls only one of the country's 22 state governments, a factor that could make it difficult for her candidates when the campaign opens officially this week.

Most observers of India's confused, disjointed political scene believe that a Gandhi victory hinges on her ability to recapture the backing of the two largest minority groups, which she lost during the emergency. These are the Untouchables, estimated to number 100 million, and the Moslims, estimated at 75 million.

A major factor working against her regaining support of the Untouchables is that Janata Party President Jagjivan Ram, 76, considered her major opponent, is himself an Untouchable. Ram has long been a symbol of Untouchable aspirations and is bound to carry some part of his community.

She has had only limited success in wooing back the Moslim vote. A leading Moslim religious figure, the imam of Delhi's Jama Masjid Mosque, Abdullah Bukhari, issued a statement of unqualified endorsement for her last month, but now is reportedly having second thoughts following some negative reaction within the Moslim community.

Still, with the election less than a month away, most independent observers agree that the momentum still lies with the Gandhi campaign. Sensing the tide, several members of Parliament who deserted her have returned to her party, either, according to one observer, "for reasons of unprincipled opportunism or fear of reprisal should she win."

Other things seem to be breaking her way too. Recently a key witness in the court case that resulted in Sanjay Gandhi's conviction for destroying an anti-government film admitted that he had given false testimony.

The film's producer, Amrit Nahata, said he had been persuaded to testify falsely against Sanjay Gandhi by none other than the current prime minister, Charan Singh. Sanjay Gandhi's conviction is now under appeal in the Supreme Court.

Nahata's statement was the latest in a series of setbacks for Singh and other Gandhi opponents.

Singh's campaign has been thrown into disarray. His party is wracked by dissension and defections and the few campaign trips outside his home state of Uttar Pradesh have produced small and unresponsive crowds. His performance as caretaker prime minister has inspired little confidence.

Adding to Singh's woes, his party's electoral alliance with a remnant of the splintered Congress Party has come unstuck, with both parties issuing separate manifestos and lists of candidates.

For example, when she said publicly that a member of her cabinet eight years ago was a CIA agent, one of Singh's senior lieutenants quickly named Ram as the likely minister. Ram, bypassing the Gandhi allegation, concentrated his counterattack on Singh for "doling out lies, untruths, insults and abuses."

Ram's campaign against Mrs. Gandhi has also been blunted by persistent reports that he may join forces with her. He has denied these reports as "vicious rumors."

Election day Feb. 18

★ Tories roll back gasoline tax hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark said today an 18-cent rise in the excise tax on gasoline and motor fuels imposed in Tuesday's budget will be rolled back.

Clark told a news conference shortly after announcing that an election will be called Feb. 18 that other excise tax increases imposed in the budget — an apparent reference to higher taxes on tobacco and alcohol — will also be removed.

The alcohol tax rollback won't affect B.C. because the increases had not yet been tacked on.

Bob Wallace, general manager of the liquor distribution branch in Vancouver, said today his staff were in "a holding pattern" until they heard officially what the status of the taxes was to be.

A long list of other promised legislation also goes into limbo. Dissolution of Parliament means it dies and must be reintroduced in the next government.

Motorists began paying 18 cents a gallon more for gasoline — about four cents a litre — Wednesday morning as a result of Crosbie's increase in the federal excise tax to 25 cents a gallon.

Clark said the defeat of the government over the budget in the Commons Thursday meant that the excise tax measures and possibly some other parts of the budget could not be applied.

"We cannot continue with this excise tax because it is part of a budget package that was defeated by the Liberals and the NDP," Clark said.

He said Finance Minister John Crosbie planned to make a detailed statement on the status of the budget measures.

Clark said that if re-elected with a majority Feb. 18 that he would introduce the same budget measures.

Other legislation that dies is the mortgage interest and property tax scheme that would have paid homeowners up to $1,500 a year when it was fully implemented in the fourth year. For 1979, homeowners would have been eligible for up to $375 or one-quarter of the benefit.

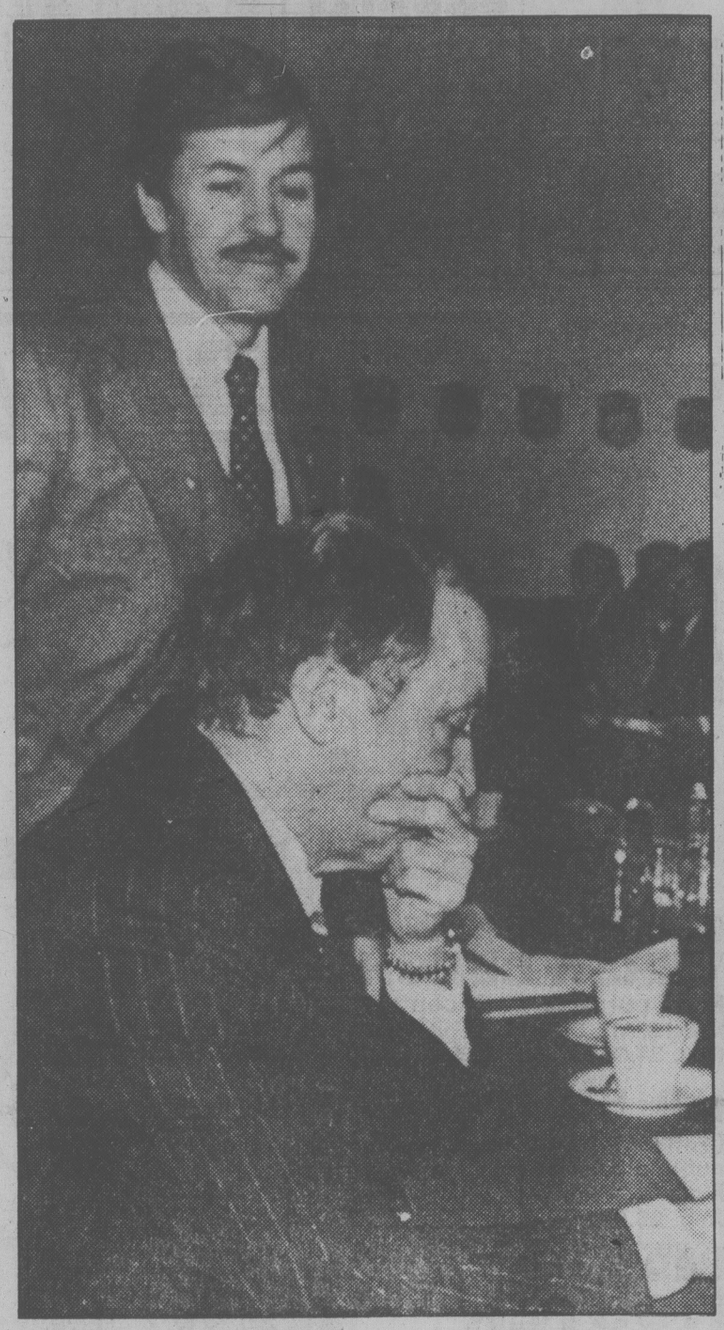

The government already is distributing income tax forms for the 1979 taxation year with the spaces for the tax credit included. Taxpayers apparently will be asked to ignore the sections.

Also on the list was the long-promised freedom-of-information bill which would have opened up the massive volumes of government records to easier public access.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon also said today the government has decided that, because of its defeat in the Commons Thursday night, it cannot make a selection of one of the two American fighters it had been considering.

The government had been prepared to spend $2.3 billion on either the General Dynamics F-16 or the MacDonnell Douglas F-18A. After years of study the government had been prepared to announce its choice within 24 hours.

McKinnon said he and Prime Minister Clark decided today that in view of the Commons defeat the government could not go ahead with the enormous expense at this time.

Trudeau silent as Grits gather

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark announced today that Parliament has been dissolved and a general election called for Feb. 18.

Clark made the announcement in the Commons a few hours after returning from a visit with Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer where he asked that Parliament be dissolved.

Clark met with Schreyer for 50 minutes at 8 a.m. EDT, 10 hours after the defeat of his minority government in the Commons.

The announcement was greeted by loud cheers from MPs on both sides of the Commons.

Liberal MPs then met behind closed doors to discuss who will lead them through the winter campaign.

Pierre Trudeau emerged after a 35-minute caucus and declined comment. "I have to move quickly to meet my kids," he said as he hustled home for lunch.

The Liberal national executive is meeting during the weekend and any decision on leadership during the campaign must be authorized by that 36-member body.

Trudeau announced three weeks ago that he intends to resign as leader and a leadership convention had been planned for March 28-30 in Winnipeg.

There appeared to be a movement in the Parliamentary caucus to encourage Trudeau to lead the Liberal campaign.

The Clark government, slightly less than seven months old, was defeated 139-133 in the Commons Thursday on a motion sponsored by the New Democratic Party condemning the government for its first budget unveiled Tuesday.

The campaign could start almost immediately.

Party strategists met hurriedly to work out details of the 66-day campaign including such things as the chartering of aircraft to ferry the leaders across the country, the printing of campaign literature and the raising of money.

A number of Liberals have said they were not ready for the campaign — that most of their efforts had been concerned with planning for the leadership changeover — while the Conservatives have been kept on a campaign footing for the past few months.

Officials of the New Democratic Party said party fundraisers were already on the

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian taxpayers may end up spending $100 million on elections in less than a year.

Final figures for the May 22 general election haven't yet been tabulated but the chief electoral office estimates the cost at $52 million.

In the last election a $17 million enumeration bill was the government's largest expense. It cost about $13 million to set up polling stations, $7 million to print enumeration lists and ballots and $6 million to hire returning officers, enumerators and poll clerks. The electoral office ran up another $5 million and

Sharp jump in transport costs boosts inflation rate to 9.4%

OTTAWA (CP) — A sharp rise in transportation costs pushed consumer prices up one per cent in November from October, the largest monthly change since May, Statistics Canada reported today.

The latest figures push the inflation rate for the 12 months ending in November to 9.4 per cent, slightly ahead of the 9.3 per cent rate recorded for 12 months to October.

Higher transportation and housing costs accounted for two-thirds of the over-all monthly rise.

As a result, the consumer price index for all items stands at 197.8 for November, up from 195.9 the previous month and 180.8 in November, 1978.

That means that the standard basket of goods and services which cost $100 in 1971 — the year the index base was set at 100 — now costs $197.80.

The purchasing power of a 1971 dollar in November was about 51 cents compared with 1971, unchanged from October but down from 55 cents a year ago.

Costs in the housing sector rose by 0.7 per cent last month from October as a result of increases for both rented and owned accommodation, fuel oil, household furnishings and equipment.

Increases in food prices of 0.2 per cent in November over the month before were the least inflationary of all segments of the index. But compared to a year ago, food prices are still 12.2 per cent higher and lead the index for all consumer prices.

Offsetting the food index performance, were continued strong increases in clothing prices which jumped 1.2 per cent from the month before and, as well, a 1.6-per-cent rise in health and personal care costs such as dental charges, hairdressing services and alcoholic beverages.

Prices were up in all cities in the survey. Twelve-month cost-of-living increases for 15 major cities in the survey were:

St. John's, Nfld., up 9.8 per cent; Charlottetown-Summerside, up 8.6 per cent; Halifax, up 9.0 per cent; St. John, N.B., up 9.3 per cent; Quebec, up 10 per cent; Montreal, up 10.3 per cent; Ottawa, up 9.3 per cent; Toronto, up 9.7 per cent; Thunder Bay, Ont., up 9.2 per cent; Winnipeg, up 9.3 per cent; Regina, up 9.4 per cent; Saskatoon, up 10.5 per cent; Edmonton, up 8.7 per cent; Calgary, up 8.9 per cent; Vancouver, up 7.5 per cent.

TSE index plummets

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market dropped extremely sharply in active mid-session trading Friday.

The TSE 300 index was down 32.34 to 1,733.50 ing the defeat of the federal government Thursday night.

All of the 14 stock groups fell, with the largest drop in real estate and construction.

The dollar opened at 85.12 cents (U. S.) after closing at 85.62 Thursday. The currency has lost exactly one cent since Tuesday when it closed at 86.12 following what analysts called "good energy news."

"It's simple: the dollar went down because there's no government," said one trader tersely.

Iraq attacks Iranian border

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iraqi forces using heavy artillery today launched attacks at locations along the border with Iran but pulled back a short time later, the Iranian government reported.

The state radio blamed the United States for fomenting the attack.

The radio quoted the government in the region as saying, "Iraqi forces armed with heavy weapons launched an aggression on a section of the Iranian border."

"The Iraqi aggression," it added. "is taking place at a time when President Carter's government and its agents are defeated in their confrontation against the Iranian nation's will and determination (but) may succeed through their agents (in the attacks in southwest Iran)."

Later, an Iranian foreign ministry spokesman said: "I understand they came a little bit into our country and then they went back to their country and it's going to be all right."

The two countries share the "neck" of the gulf through which flows some 60 percent of the free wo... oil.

The attack appeared to be close to the Shatt el-Arab River which forms a natural frontier between Iran and Iraq. The same area was the scene of fierce fighting between Iranian government forces and ethnic Arab guerrillas last summer and Iran accused Iraq of aiding the rebels.

Meanwhile, in The Hague, an official said today the International Court of Justice, working at unprecedented speed, will give its judgment Saturday in the case brought against Iran by the United States.

The decision follows the public hearing Monday in which U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti appealed to the court to order the release of 50 American hostages.

In other developments:

— Observers in Tehran predict a team of Western ambassadors will visit the 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in the next day or two as Ayatollah Khomeini's regime steps up its efforts to woo the international community.

— The U.S freeze on Iranian government assets is beginning to pinch some small American businesses that are still awaiting payment for goods already delivered.

— Japan bowed to U.S. pressure today to curb its dealings with Iran and agreed to limit its oil imports until the 50 U.S. hostages held in Tehran are freed.

— The Fijian cabinet has overruled a decision by Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara to allow the deposed shah sanctuary in Fiji.

— The health of the shah may have worsened and doctors who treated him in New York will fly to Texas to see whether the former monarch needs further surgery.

Somenos eyed for hotel

DUNCAN — The battle to save Somenos Flats, a swampy, grassy bird sanctuary just north of the city limits, resumed this week when North Cowichan council was presented with a proposal for a three-storey, 84-room hotel.

Joe Silva, president of Tops auto dealership, said the project calls for construction on two lots covering 7.16 acres. More than half the property is zoned for agricultural use.

Council decided to consider the proposal and to give some indication of its stand at the next meeting Wednesday.

Sannich eyes towaway rules

Towaway firms operating in Saanich may soon find themselves facing a new set of rules.

Council's bylaw enforcement committee has recommended a revamped bylaw to regulate the towing business.

The committee made the decision after discovering that Gordon's Towing Ltd. was operating without a business licence earlier this year.

If approved by council, the bylaw would require owners be given adequate warning before their cars are towed away and would establish a maximum fee for getting vehicles back.

Mayor Mel Couvelier suggested creating a special zone for storage compounds because tow truck operators won't pay the price for an M-1 zoned property.

Alan Murray, 3938 Cedar Hill Crossroad, complained to the committee that five cars, including his, were towed away from Village Park Estates on Gordon Head Road.

Gordon's Towing charged $25 for return of the cars while other operators fees usually range from $14 to $18, Murray said.

By ANNE SWANNELL

High atop the hill between Oak Bay Avenue and Rockland, on a winding lane called Terrace Avenue, which is lined with aristocratic reminders of Victoria's elegant past, is a three story mansion with a lookout tower that offers 360 degree views of the city, the straits, the Olympics, and The Sooke Hills.

Once the home of one of B.C.'s premiers, it now consists of eight strata title condominium homes, all of which have sold in the last three and weeks.

People who want to live in one of Victoria's most elite areas, who want a character home that expresses their individuality, and who don't want to have to maintain a house and a garden, are living here now in homes that range in price from $75,900 to $127,000.

1001 Terrace was designed by Samuel Maclure and built for William John Bowser in 1912. He became Premier in 1915, and was known as "The Napoleon" of Politics in B.C., because he was brusque and uncompromising, and of similar physique to his name-sake.

The mansion was the Bowser family residence until 1976; one of Bowser's daughters and a cook were living in part of it when the house and four acres of land surrounding it was purchased by a group of businessmen who wanted to turn the house into condominium homes.

Strata title building requirements and the alterations necessary to comply with regulations governing them were more extensive than anticipated.

The property was sold to a Victoria developer, who finished and sold the homes. The sales were not able to be finalized due to legal problems with the subdivision of the parcel of land, on which single family residences will be built. Once the legalities were ironed out, an interior decorating and marketing firm called Barbara Bristol Interior Design was called in.

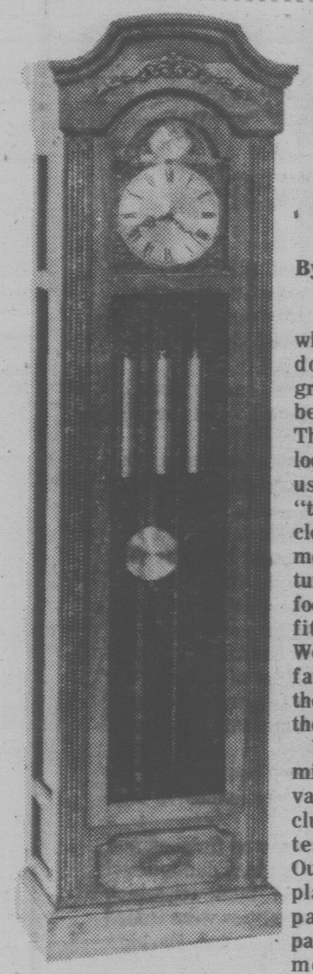

Further renovations and alterations were made, and many design features added, such as mirrored walls, built-in bars, elegant fabric-covered window seat cushions, foil-papered bathrooms. Since the eight homes, one of which incorporates the look-out tower and a sleeping loft under the sky-lit eaves, have been up for sale, they have been going like hot-cakes.

Making such a mansion into strata-titled condominium homes is more than just chopping up the space into single family size divisions. Each has to be plumbed, wired, and insulated to modern building code standards, and the cost of doing this is very high, as much as $30,000 or $40,000 for each one.

The new owners have fallen in love with the granite portico and its in-laid marble steps, with the magnificent entry hall's oak panelling and staircase, with the fireplaces; some marble, some with lion's head supports, some with plaster insets, and with the glorious views.

Obviously, converting these gracious homes of the past is an appealing and marketable idea, going by the rate at which homes like this are selling, and by the interest stirred even in Vancouver by such a concept. But the cost factor in doing such conversions is prohibitive, according to a sales representative for the developer.

Grandfather clock plans for less than $4

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Of all furniture pieces which have been handed down from the past, grandfather clocks must be the most treasured. The straight-sided heirloom clock shown here is usually referred to as "the king of grandfather clocks." It is certainly the most elegant. In this picture, our handsome six-footer (actually 74") is fitted with the famous Westminister movement, faithfully reproducing the melody of Big Ben in the Tower of London.

Yet its design also permits the use of a wide variety of movements, including inexpensive battery-powered models. Our detailed step-by-step plan includes full-size patterns for certain parts. A new simplified method of making the fancy crown is fully illustrated.

All parts (except the crown) are made with straight pieces which are butt-jointed. The size of each piece is precisely called out in a materials list. In the event you can't find the necessary clock movements locally, a source of supply is listed.

You may choose from a wide variety of lumber and plywood, such as pine, walnut, cherry or mahogany. Just trace the pattern parts onto wood, saw out and assemble.

A plastic pool — holding 25 gallons of water — is purchased for $10. The pool's measurements are 21 inches wide and 19 inches deep. The pool can be used as is, or for a more decorative look can be placed in a half wine barrel. If you put casters on the barrel, you have a portable pool that can be moved to different areas of the terrace.

The next thing to consider is what goes into the pool. The first thing that will probably come to mind is water lilies. They are,in fact, essential to a pool garden because they lend an elegant and exotic beauty to the pool, and, even more important, the pads prevent the loss of oxygen and keep the water cooler.

Hardy water lilies give the impression that they are difficult to grow and need protection. The truth is that they are far from delicate and can survive considerable abuse. Lilies dislike shade and all they need to flower abundantly is correct planting at a comfortable depth of water and a place in the sun. The more sun, the more flowers.

The other elements you will need are oxygenating grasses, snails and two or three fish that are four to five inches long.

For snails, use a dozen ramshorn or trap-door water snails. The snails eat the algae, fish wastes and decaying matter which encourages algae growth.

The fish play an important role, also. They eat pests such as aphids, flies, mosquito larvae and other insects.

Together these elements form an ecological system for the pool garden where plants, fish and snails all live in harmony.

In addition to being a beautiful and unusual addition to the terrace or patio, a water garden can be a source of edible plants, according to Ortho's book. These include water chestnuts, watercress and taro.

Watercress is an excellent plant to grow and provides an almost instant crop. There will be enough for salads in a matter of a few weeks.

Humidity, condensation, and repairing fiberglass showers

NOW YOU KNOW By George Dalgleish

Q. I have a problem with my windows sweating during the winter. How do I determine what the humidity level should be in the house to prevent this?

A. As the air gets cold outside the relative humidity of the air inside your house has to be reduced to prevent condensation on windows. Below is a chart for practical humidity levels. You'll note that there is a 10 per cent difference in the suggested humidity levels. Use the higher percentage if you have a new home with triple glazed windows and good insulation. Use the lower setting if you have an older home, inefficient windows and poor insulation. However, you may find that a percentage level between the two figures may be practical for your house. Increase or decrease the humidity level until you have a slight condensation on the very bottom of the window and that should be about the right setting.

Outside Air Temperature (Celcius)	Corresponding Percentage for Practical Humidity Level
—34°C	15%-25%
—29°C	20%-30%
—23°C	25%-35%
—18°C	30%-40%
—12°C	35%-45%
— 7°C	40%-50%
— 1°C	45%-55%
Summer	100%

Q. We purchased a one-piece fibreglass shower unit to put in our basement. While moving it into the basement it was dropped and we cracked the corner of the unit. Could you please tell us how we could repair it?

A. Likely the company that you bought the unit from would have a repair kit. However if they don't you could purchase a fiberglass repair kit from a boat dealer. These are used for repairing holes in fiberglass boats. The kit usually consists of a small amount of fiberglass cloth plus a liquid that would be brushed over the fiberglass cloth. The unfortunate part is that usually these kits do not come in colors that would match your fiberglass shower. If the crack has not opened up or isn't too severe, you could use a silicone sealing compound. This material is available in caulking tubes and does come in a number of colors and white. These are available from building supply dealers.

Q. We have built a new house with a cold storage room under the entrance which is on the north side of the house. The cold storage room is made from cement blocks with a dirt floor. We are having excessive condensation problems in this cold storage room. Can you tell us how to get rid of it?

A. Although you didn't say where the condensation was occurring, I would expect that it is on the cement block walls. This is because warm moist air from your house is getting into the cold storage area and condensating onto the cement blocks. It may be that all you have to do is install weatherstrippng around the door to the cold storage area to prevent the warm moist air from the house escaping into that area. If however this doesn't work then a thin layer of polystyrene insulation could be glued to the cement blocks. I would suggest half-inch Styrofoam which would not insulate the walls that well that it would cut down the cold in the room, but it would prevent the warm moist air from getting into the cold blocks which is causing your problem.

Q. We are finishing a basement room and there are water supply pipes that are about an inch away from the wall. Should we cover them up and where should we place the insulation?

A. In colder areas of the country the water supply pipes will freeze if covered up with insulation. Stuff as much insulation behind the water pipes as you can and then don't use any insulation in that stud section. There should be enough heat loss through the wall panel to prevent the pipes from freezing.

The best thing is to remove the pipes and replace them on the top of the basement wall finish. Another method of preventing pipes from freezing when they are next to a concrete wall, is to insulate as much of the wall as possible, but no insulatin on top of the pipes and then install a piece of pegboard in that stud section only. This would usually mean a strip of pegboard 16 inches wide floor to ceiling. This will allow enough warm air into the stud section. Remember that when using pegboard you can't use a vapor barrier.

A.E. LePAGE WESTERN LTD. REALTOR

By ANNE SWANNELL

High above Brentwood Bay is a house that belongs to an artist and his wife. It's been added to bit by bit since they bought it six years ago, until today, though still not finished, it's an example of just how much can be done with what began as little more than a shack, and a lot of imagination.

The artist is Harry Heine, a water-colorist, whose work sells as rapidly as he can produce it. It was Harry's painting of three ships of Captain Cook's time, with the misty forests and mountains of Vancouver Island (on the wall above his drawing board here) which was commissioned by the Government of B.C. for use in the Captain Cook Bi-Centennial promotional campaign in 1978.

Harry and Barbara's daughter, Karen, makes her living as an artist too. She paints miniatures of flowers and plants, and her studio is in the basement level of the Brentwood Bay house. Both rooms on this level are painted completely white, which gives such a light, airy feeling, it's hard to believe one is in the basement. Heating ducts in the ceiling were boxed in neatly rather than completely covered up, which creates a most interesting architectural effect, lending the solidarity of beams, without their heaviness and weight.

Karen's room is completely white; a haven of tranquility with its quiet accent shades of denim blue and mauve-brown, seen here in the striped cover on her built-in bed. Even furniture which is not built in is melamine, which looks as though it's part of the room because it, like the walls, is white.

Much of the wood in the additions to the original house is brine-soaked wood which was once part of the old Brentwood ferry dock. Harry apparently, immediately after they moved in, the pressing needs of his growing family becoming more apparent each day, decided he must get to work at once. It was while he was en route to this house that he spied the dismantled dock lying beside the ferry slip. The decision to get to work, and the means by which he could accomplish it, hit almost simultaneously; he bought the wood, dashed off a few sketches, and construction began. Fortunately, in him, the artists's inspiration and the drive to get things done combine; obviously he's a doer as well as a dreamer, and when he isn't painting every day from breakfast to sun-down in readiness for one of the three exhibitions he has a year, he's working on the house.

"I like to be in a different place when I'm in another room" says Barbara, which accounts for the confident use of colour throughout the house. The kitchen is bright orange, the master bedroom shades of lilac; there is orange and brown mylar and mirror tile in the living room. One bedroom is wood paneled with vivid marine blue accents. One bathroom is hot pink and white. Another is brown and silver.

It all works well together because everything is so beautifully proportioned, and because of the way the house is laid out. Colours don't clash because you don't see one room from another as you would in an open plan modern house.

PLAN Nº 65-1152

13.4 m.// 44 ft./pi.

PLAN OF THE WEEK

This two-bedroom, full basement, traditional cottage conceals an amazing amount of useable living space within its shutter-accented and horizontal siding clad walls.

The dining room separates from the L-shape kitchen via sliding door, and from the rear patio by centre-opening double doors — the latter quite simply modified to sliding glass for those who prefer.

The single-car garage provides ample space to the rear for a home workshop for the handyman. Extra space alongside the garage allows for the future development of a good-sized utility and mud room conbination, or a family room for active children.

Each of the bedrooms has generous closet storage and an L-shape layout which, again, allows for future development. The master could have a large walk-in closet, or some combination of lounge-closet-ensuite, etc. The second bedroom could also have an ensuite with shower or lounge area in its extra space. For those who require an additional bedroom, the downstairs den lends itself to the future development of either bedroom or office for the business or professional family.

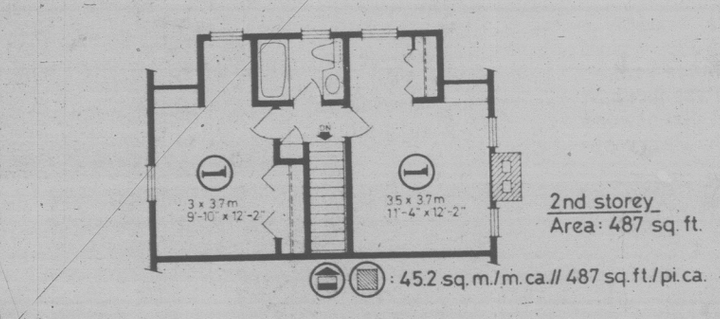

And we still have a full basement for development into a recreation room, hobby area, storage facilities, or whatever, for the growing family.

Plan for design No. 78-1291 may be purchased wether by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

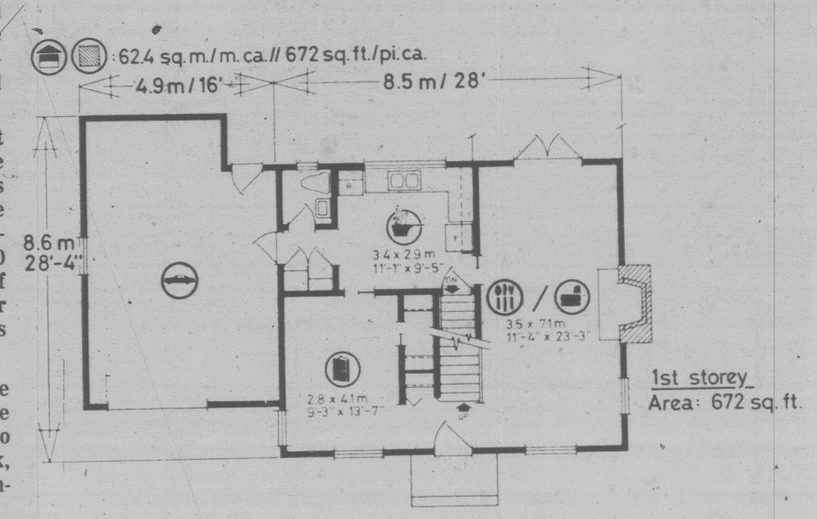

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus. 75 cents postage and handling).

HOMESCENE

FEHIN BAJRIC, who goes by the name of Frank, hails from Yugoslavia, and came to Canada in 1968. He grows his own grapes for wine-making in his garden at 824 Russell. At this time of year, the young grape plants are transplanted to their growing place, and will mature in two or three years. Here, Fehin is scrubbing out one of the barrels he will use for the wine. He took veterinary training in Yugoslavia, worked with animals in Saskatchewan when he first came to Canada, later moved to Kamloops. He is also a brick layer, a welder, and carpenter.

Single women in housing market

Housing and the single woman: fast becoming the most significant love affair in the country. Last year one out of every 12 home sales involved a purchase by a single woman. Next year that rate is expected to climb to one out of every 10 sales.

That reflects a surprisingly rapid jump in the homebuying activities of single gals. As recent as 1978 they accounted for only one in 16 home sales. If you focus in on condominions, a full one-third of the sales last year were to single women. And that proportion is also growing.

By single women we're referring to those who have never married and those who have been widowed, divorced or separated.

Also women are moving up in the business and professional world. They hold higher-paying jobs and are thus in a stronger position to buy and finance a home of their own.

Single women today, with more freedom, money and income potential than ever before, are particulary interested in sound investment opportunities. They see ownership of a home as probably the best investment obtainable in the current market. Also, they are motivated by such factors as security, privacy and "pride of ownership" — like nearly all Canadians who desire and seek a home of their own.

"Building a Better Way"

For your door or wall select a few nicely shaped branches of fir, pine or cedar. You will also require an oblong piece of 2 inch thick styrofoam approximately 6''x8'', heavy wire, pine cones, red ribbon and red velvet poinsettias. Place styro on table. With a sharp knife, slice pieces of greenery to a point and push well into sides of styro, forming an oblong shape. Working into the centre, add shorter pieces of greens till quite full. Make a large bow, leaving 2 long streamers, wrap a short wire around centre of bow bringing the two ends together and twist, then push into centre of styro through greens. Cut stems of poinsettias tapering to approximately 6 inches long with wirecutters, and place in the styro around the bow. Add a few pine cones by wrapping wire around bottom of cone. Make a hanger with wire or ribbon.

The basis for any professional-looking flower arrangement is a glass frog, a needlepoint holder, or, best of all, a piece of what florists call "oasis". This is a green foam material into which you poke flower and greenery stems, so that they will hold the angle you want without having to be propped against other parts of the arrangement. You can buy a block of it from a florist for about $1 which is enough to make two or three arrangements.

To brighten the Christmas breakfast table, arrange greens, red carnations, holly, and white daisies in a bowl placed inside a wicker basket. Tie a red and white checkered bow onto the handle. You could use the same ribbon to tie around egg cups or the handles of your coffee cups to carry the theme around the table.

For your dinner table, which will be so laden with goodies there won't be much room for flowers, make an arrangment in a low bowl using styrofoam oasis. Insert one or two red candles into the oasis. Fill up all around with sprigs of pine and holly, keeping them low and dot a few white spray mums and red velvet bows, pine cones or baubles into the greens and you will have many compliments from your family and guests. Don't forget to light your candles and always have extra on hand to replace them. The greens in this arrangement will last for weeks if you remember to keep the water topped up.

Why Dallas Rd.?

It was named for Alexander Grant Dallas, who came to Victoria in 1857 from London, to be withThe Hudson's Bay Company on the Pacific Coast. A year later, he married Jane, the second daughter of Sir James Douglas. Dallas was appointed Governor of Rupert's Land, and went to Winnipeg for two years before returning to England.

Your time has come to own a dream

The view is panoramic and takes in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and Victoria. It's a restful view with slow moving ships and unhurried Victorians all playing their part. The stained glass surrounding the door was gleaned from several older houses in the area and adds a touch of distinction as well as a link with the past.

If you're dreaming of a view home in Oak Bay, Victoria, and you enjoy your comfort and convenience, please call me today. I will be pleased to reply to your request.

Yours truly,

Michael J. Kennaugh

Can Fonzie play Scrooge?

Winkler said the script follows the original A Christmas Carol almost to the letter although it is set in a small New Hampshire town during the Depression.

"This character is important to my life," Winkler said. "There's a difference between it's being important to my life and to my career.

"I play Benedict Slade at three different ages of his life — 21, 34 and 70. Most of the time I'm seen at 70 which meant I had to spend 5-½ hours in the makeup chair every morning and an hour getting it off my face.

STARTLING NEW LOOK is worn by Henry Winkler when he stars as the meanest man who ever tried to sour Christmas in an updated movie version of the classic Charles Dickens' tale. Sunday night on Channel 4.
